GC debt unavoidable in fiscal year

Granite City aldermen were told by Comptroller Joseph Miklovic they can look forward to a year ending $554,000 in debt with no funds available for salary increases, capital improvements or emergencies. The city's deficit could expand to $1.48 million if all funds are fully paid, he added.

Despite the 34-percent added sales tax which began Jan. 1, the city will have no resources to replace police vehicles that have had continuous maintenance problems, to bail out the wastewater treatment plant, as it is done in the past, or to pay any major legal judgments that might be decided against the city.

Miklovic said his cash flow projections did not make provisions for $136,000 in catch-up funds the city will need to keep its self-insured workmen's compensation fund current; $500,000 in accumulated sick-leave days owed employees upon retirement, or $300,000 in addition funds the state insurance commission advised the city to levy for police and fire pension funds.

Those funds add $800,000 on top of the $500,000 the city will owe, Miklovic said Tuesday.

Ordinance Committee Chairman Alderman Paul Fisk of the Third Ward had asked the city's new comptroller to give this year's cash flow projections prior to placing a one-percent liquor and restaurant added sales tax on the council floor for a final vote.

"This city needs this kind of Comptroller says new taxes cannot overcome city loans assistance much more so after hearing this report," Fisk said. The council, however, decided to defer action on the "luxury tax," which could generate $280,000 to $390,000 per year.

Miklovic said the city's current expenditures are exceeding its budget by approximately $56,000 per month—while $501,000 per month is budgeted and approximately $556,000 is actually spent.

At the end of December, the city will need more than half a million dollars to pay its general fund bills, after repaying $600,000 owed in tax anticipation warrants next October.

The comptroller said his projections require $100,000 a month from the city's 34-percent added sales tax, with those revenues not expected to begin until March.

Since he could not predict future events, which may include a court challenge to the city's new sales tax, Miklovic said he could not absolutely guarantee his cash-flow predictions. Figures are based on no further city cutbacks in personnel or services. Revenues from corporate replacement taxes are based on last year's income, as are predictions of state income and sales tax income for the city, according to Miklovic.

Cash flow estimates for January through December are: January, $476,000 (with $600,000 in tax warrants outstanding); February, -$200,000; March, -$261,000; April, -$170,000; May, -$266,000; June, -$409,000; July, -$219,000; August, -$389,000; September, -$401,000; October, -$336,000 (with $600,000 in tax money paid for tax warrants); November, -$572,000;

December, -$554,000.

The cash-flow projection does include funds for a one-percent salary increase for city workers in March which already has been approved by the council.

Field work has been finished on a long-awaited 1981-82 budget audit report, the comptroller told aldermen, but auditors are waiting for the city's legal department to give figures on outstanding legal claims against the city.

"They will not release it (the audit) until they receive that legal release," Miklovic said. The comptroller said, however, that he has received an informal copy of that report.

IN THE NEWS

Names in the news this week include Madison County State's Attorney Don Weber, left, who is investigating allegations by Thomas Brimberry, center, that he gave campaign contributions to former Granite City mayor candidates Don Portney, right, which Portney did not report on required campaign documents.

Accusations begin as Stix inquiry expands

By BILL WINTER

A "winter of discontent" has arrived in Madison County. Once close friends and business associates are bitterly pointing accusing fingers at each other in a prosecution draws near and as U.S. state and county investigators trample each other underfoot.

The $16 million Stix & Co. stock brokerage "scam" that broke on the public's consciousness in November may leave many persons "broke" in funds and others broken in spirit. It is a tale of criminality and tragedy but nevertheless one that is fascinating to area residents as it unfolds.

Madison County State's Attorney Donna Weber, who campaigned on an "Attila the Hun" platform, has leaped into the investigative arena with the kind of reckless abandon football coaches urge their players to display.

An assistant state's attorney was in the Press-Record office this week checking spring 1981 advertising expenditures by the three aspirants for mayor of Granite City.

A representative of the Illinois State Board of Elections financial disclosure division was not far behind the assistant prosecutor. The state agent was busily looking into overall mayor election spending patterns.

Noting that Thomas R. Brimberry of Granite City, the key figure in the Stix expose, says he gave a big sum to the Daniel Portney mayor campaign, Weber this week arranged for the start of an investigation by the fraud and forgery staff of the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation.

Philip Kocis, described as a DCI forgery squad leader, conferred with Weber on Monday. And the county prosecutor has begun talking publicly about conducting a grand jury probe.

Balks at license fees

By GEORGEANN MCGEE

Granite City's updated business license ordinance, which would increase restaurant one-percent luxury tax, both previously rejected after protest and pressure from the business community, were delayed Tuesday by the Granite City Council.

Alderman Sam Whitmer of the Second Ward, who proposed deferring action, said the amendment to the business licensing ordinance given to council members just prior to their meeting did not give aldermen a chance to study the last-minute changes.

Mayor Paul Schuler said the amendment written by Aldermen Casmer Skubish and Everett Morlen, both of the First Ward, adjusted downward some fees on the update. The only other notable change, according to the mayor, was the two aldermen's suggested increase of fees for some restaurants and slightly decreasing fees for others.

Passed by the council 10-3, the amendment increases fees for each bowling alley ($5 to $7.50), confectonary ($40 to $50); funeral home ($25 to $50); and jewelry store ($25 to $50).

Before the amendment, the business fees for restaurants with 25 chairs or less was $25; 50 or less, $50, and over $50 was $100. The amendment charges the same $75 fee for all restaurants seating 100 or less and charges $100 for establishments with more than 100 chairs.

Decreases approved are a drop of $25 for some types of garages, and decrease from $100 to a new $50 fee for fruit stands.

The amendment also creates some new categories, among them fees for coin-operated pool table, which may already be included under the Automatic Amusement Devices ordinance given final approval Tuesday.

Other new categories created by Skubish and Morlen are confectionaries selling clothing, $50, and secretaries or auctioneers, $5 per day or $25 per year.

City Attorney John Papa said it would be difficult to compare the update license ordinance with the city's current municipal codes. He said some fees remain the same, a few others have been reduced, and others increased.

Licensing fees for businesses involving unsealed food items are given higher fees from $50 to $100 to offset required health inspections, according to Papa.

Schuler said the update ordinance is not expected to bring in much more revenue to the city, but rather is intended to take into account businesses that have moved into the city since the original, approximately 60-year old, ordinance was enacted.

Some businesses overlooked in the city's municipal code book are barber and beauty shops, clothing stores, banks, drug stores, card shops, shoe stores, new furniture stores, interior and exterior decorators.

Jewelry stores, ceramic shops, new book stores, music stores, printing companies, new appliance and hardware stores, office supply stores, water bed stores and bicycle stores.

The update excludes any possibility of multiple fee listings by making a business which might fall under several listings responsible for only the greatest fee. Multiple listings had been a fear of some retailers, particularly small businesses.

Ordinance Committee Chairman Alderman Paul Fisk of the Third Ward urged the final passage of the license update Tuesday. Fisk said the ordinance has been designed to help pay administrative costs at a time the city is in financial trouble.

If seconded, a motion to defer action postpones a vote until the council meets again. The next regular council meeting is scheduled for Jan. 19.

A decision also was delayed on the added one-percent liquor and restaurant sales tax through a motion

'Open meetings' now in effect

By BILL WINTER

Beginning its adherence to provisions of the new Open Meetings Act that went into effect in Illinois Jan. 1, 1982, the Granite City Board of Education on Tuesday night adopted and sealed minutes of an executive session it had just held on employment.

Superintendent B. J. Davis said the seven board members interviewed nine applicants for a possible new job, supervisor of building custodians in the School District Nine, and discussed with the applicants the potential salary level.

No decision was made on the applicants or on the position, which may be created after the board reviews custodial service goals Jan. 19.

The minutes of the executive session were not read publicly and will be filed separately from the public minutes of regular portions of School Board meetings. They may be opened by the board at some future time if it is determined they would have no adverse effect on anyone.

Ways of adapting to the new state law were discussed by the board with William Beatty Jr., an associate of School Attorney William Schoedey. An executive session, open to newsmen and key administrators, is held at some point during most Granite City School Board meetings to review personnel decisions, court cases or property acquisitions.

As one of the requirements of the new law, President George Moore announced immediately prior to Tuesday night's executive session that it would deal with "employment of personnel and establishment of compensation."

This terminology was made a part of an official motion.

On occasions when it is decided—part of the way through an executive session—to discuss other topics than those mentioned at the start, the board will reconvene publicly. It will state the additional subjects, and then will return to its private discussion.

Executive session minutes will include the time, date, location, names of those present and the general trend of what was talked about during the session, without going into detailed comments. Formal action resulting from such discussions will continue to take place with the public present.

A dozen amendments were adopted in 1981 by the Illinois General Assembly, altering the Open Meetings Act, by enacting House Bill 411 (Public Act 82-378).

An Illinois Association of School Boards spokesman said the amendments "focus the attention of the public, news media, and enforcement agencies on some precise standards for meetings. The law now clearly provides that any citizen, including the state's attorney, can bring a civil action in court for violations of the Act."

"Citizens prevailing in a civil action under the Open Meetings Act will be able to recover their court costs and attorneys' fees from the offending public body."

"State's attorneys can still bring criminal charges against any person allegedly violating the Act. The Class C misdemeanor carries a maximum $500 fine and/or 30 days in jail."

"Public bodies that have been lackadaisical about the requirements need to stop and examine their meeting procedures," the spokesman asserted.

Madison honors Explorers on city vehicle stickers

For the first time in the history of the Cahokia Mound Boy Scout Council, and according to local Scout officials, the first time in the nation, a specific unit of the Boy Scouts of America is being honored on an official city license.

Madison's 1982 vehicle license, which became available Monday at the Madison city clerk's office, carries the logo, "Madison, Ill. Home of Explorer Post 10-4, Founded 1969," with a picture of the post emblem and then the Dec. 31, 1982, expiration and the number of the license.

Post 10-4 was officially chartered in October, 1969, under the joint sponsorship of the Madison Lions Club and Madison Police Unit 110 Police, Boyvolant and Protective Association (PB&PA).

Prior to the first actual meeting of the post, the Lions and police spent about four months laying the groundwork.

The boy scout movement was started in this country by a newspaperman from Chicago—W. D. Boyce—in 1910. Post 10-4 also was started by a newspaperman—W. F. "Mick" Strange. Strange is on the news staff of the Granite City Press-Record.

Born and reared in Madison, Strange returned to this area in January, 1969, due to his parents' illnesses. He then became a member of the Madison Lions.

Active in scouting since age 9, Strange saw there was no Exploring in the city, which did have active boy scout troops and cub scout packs.

Strange enlisted the aid of several combination Lion-police members, including Madison Mayor Mike Sasyk, who was at the time president of the Madison Board of Police Commissioners; Ed Ray Dubish, also a Lion and member of the police board; then juvenile officer now Chief of Police Donald L. Bridick; the late Mayor Stephen Maers, and several others. Four months were spent laying the ground work and foundation for the new post.

"10-4" is in its 13th year of operation and is the oldest Explorer Post in the local council, which includes the southern half of Madison County and all of Bond County.

Madison Police Unit 110 assumed total sponsorship of the Explorers in 1974. The post has always had members from the entire Quad-Cities area, not just Madison.

The purpose of the post, as outlined in bylaws, is, "to introduce Quad-City youth to the many law enforcement career opportunities; to develop leadership skills, personal integrity, and a sense of responsibility among the members and to render public service to the area."

Members of Post 10-4 have helped in varying degrees to organize 17 other posts in the local council, throughout the state of Illinois and in numerous other states.

The post averages between three to six inquiries a year on their program, organization and functions and requests for assistance.

To relieve the membership pressure of Post 10-4, the Explorers assisted the Granite City Police in 1974 in organizing Post 10-33, Steve Fischer who was Senior Scout Leader of Post 10-4 transferred to become the first president of 10-33.

Fischer, who has graduated from West Point and is a first lieutenant in the Army, stationed in Germany.

In 1975 the Madison Explorers helped the Ponton Beach Police organize Law Enforcement Post 255.

Membership in Post 10-4 is limited to 26 Explorers, as the adult leadership of the post maintain they would rather do a good job with 26 than become too large and impersonal.

Most of the time, the post has a

New Conalco sales manager

Consolidated Aluminum Corporation (Conalco) has announced that Harry T. Taylor has been promoted to national sales manager, sheet and plate, in the company's rolled products division. He had been eastern regional sales manager.

Taylor will be responsible for all sales of sheet and plate products to OEM accounts nationwide. Consolidated manufactures sheet and plate products at its Hannibal, Ohio, and Madison, Ill., plants.

Consolidated is an aluminum producer headquartered in St. Louis. The company operates 12 plants in eight states.

NORTH PLANT THEFT

Tools worth $300 were stolen from John Gibson of Granite City, it was discovered Monday. They had been in a Granite City Steel North Plant railroad locomotive in which he was installing a remote control system for the Vetcran Co. of Pittsburgh.

DISCUSSING a job "well done" are employees of the Nuclear Steam Supply System portion of the Callaway Nuclear Plant at Fulton, Mo., who were credited with completing repair work so testing could continue on schedule. From

Twins need foster home

Like many identical twins, Sharon and Linda are very close. Described by their social worker as independent, these bright and petite four-year olds get along well with each other and with the other children they encounter in their preschool classes.

Considered "hard-to-please" because of health problems and the need for a special diet, these attractive black children, wards of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, may eventually become free for adoption if their parents are not able to reassume responsibility for their care.

In any case, department social workers say they feel it is crucial that the girls not be placed in separate homes in view of their deep mutual attachment.

Since no foster home is currently available to accept both girls, separate foster home placements presently appear to be the only alternative, according to Deborah Storman, resource development worker in the department's East St. Louis field office.

Mrs. Storman added that special fees are available in view of the girls' medical problems and dietary needs.

Although single parents are frequently considered to be foster parent for teenagers, the department prefers to place younger children like Sharon and Linda with two-parent foster families, Mrs. Storman said. She added that the need for more foster parents is crucial. Metro-East residents interested in providing a home for Sharon and Linda or in learning more about the foster home program may call Shirley Faber at 876-8985.

Former Mitchell man helps test continue

Chuck Kiehn, area superintendent of the Nuclear Steam Supply System (NSSS) portion of the Callaway Nuclear Plant, located in Fulton, Mo., is well satisfied with his work crews, which includes a former Mitchell man.

Jack G. Jones Jr., a welder at the Union Electric project in Fulton, was one of three men recently called upon to quickly effect repairs in order that a special test could continue on schedule.

Jones, a 1974 graduate of Granite City High School North, now lives in St. James, Mo., with his wife, the former Lisa Smith of Granite City, and their 6-month-old daughter, Amber. Kiehn's satisfaction with his crews is something that has been built over the life of the project, it was explained.

But a recent job gave Kiehn extra reason to speak highly of his men. The stainless steel-lined fuel pool at the nuclear plant was just ready to be filled with water for testing when a hole was accidentally burned in the plate at the unhappy hour of 3 p.m.

Kiehn and area superintendent Marc Vislay immediately set about surmounting the paperwork involved in temporarily fixing the situation, so the test could continue on schedule.

Both men pointed out the craftsmanship of welders Jones and Robert Wigger, along with boilermaker Marvin Dennis, took the credit for the actual physical repair job.

The welders had to work at a "breakneck" pace, but they worked "excellently," reported Kiehn, to repair the liner, keeping the testing procedure on schedule.

After the pool and its leak chases had been tested, permanent repairs were made to insure the purity of the stainless steel liner.

Jones gained most of his welding training while attending Granite City High School South, having transferred to North High in his senior year, according to his mother, Mrs. Shirley Jones of Mitchell.

He also is the son of the late Jack G. Jones Sr. of Mitchell.

HOME BURGLARIZED

Carol Edwards, 2317 Paul Ave., discovered at 10 p.m. Thursday, that while she was at church, her residence had been burglarized. Items taken included a stereo phonograph valued at $500, about 50 record albums valued at $200, two metallic gold angel figures and a gift-candle.

Accusations

Brimberry alleges giving $75,000 to the mayor campaign. The former candidate says the amount was $500 and that it was fully reported.

Partney, an elected official from the County Board, citing a divorce and custody dispute. He admits large personal expenditures and says he could not afford them from his business income.

Partney denies any wrongdoing, nor have officials accused him of anything. As an elected official and a watchdog role, condemning what he viewed as corruption or waste in government, Partney believes it is that he will be exonerated in regard to his reporting of campaign receipts.

Meanwhile, as indictments are awaited in the looting of the brokerage, four persons criticized by Brimberry—James Massa, Jerry Maeras, Fred Arnstein and Arthur Miller Jr.—are talking to their lawyers.

Maeras, a Madison businessman, transferred much of his property to his children about the time that the Stix investigation was disclosed. He says no inferences should be drawn about his reasons for doing so.

With two United States attorneys' staffs active in the Stix investigation along with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Internal Revenue Service and the Securities and Exchange Commission, facts and gossip continue to circulate in a dizzying whirl of allegations, assumptions, admissions and suspicions, leading to a wide range of sweeping conclusions, some perhaps accurate and many inaccurate.

Conclusion-jumping, in fact, has begun to rival jogging in the list of favorite local exercises.

Madison Countyans who may not have been impressed by the Stix & Co. writup in Barron's national business newspaper last month now know that the scandal has developed truly mammoth proportions. It is featured in the Jan. 12 National Enquirer, which fortunately forgot to mention Granite City in its 48-square-inch coverage on Page 9.

The Enquirer shows a picture of Brimberry's "million-dollar mansion" on Westmoreland Drive and contends that "doing the dirty work" in one of the largest stock thefts of all time was "a man who just a few years earlier had been earning $150 a week."

It traces his "rags to riches" advancement and estimates his Stix salary at $300,000 a year. The IRS does not give a breakdown on salary, commissions and lootings but says Brimberry got more than $1 million annually in some of the years from 1975 to 1980.

Including gambling, high living, gifts and hosting of groups' travel to resorts, Brimberry understandably gained a reputation as a big spender who "got rid of money like it was going out of style."

If about ten Stix clients and 15 company officers may lose an aggregate of $14 million to $18 million, some of it insured and some not insured, who is at fault? No one? One person? How many? If this is "the tip," how big is the iceberg?

Massa, a Collinsville attorney, a director of Stix and its majority owner, says he took no part in operating the brokerage firm.

Arnstein, a St. Louis broker who was president of Stix, says he had lost control of its day-to-day operations. Brimberry has not seen the agreement with Brimberry but has heard that it may involve a willfully false document charge, with a probable three-year sentence. He calls this a minor response by the federal government to a major tax case.

Those involved in the pending prosecution include U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Dittmeyer of the St. Louis district and Assistant U.S. Attorney Clifford J. Proud of the East St. Louis district.

Brimberry, who rose from clerk to senior vice-president in charge of operations, has said he used phony stock certificates and other methods to avoid detection of thefts from private investment accounts at Stix.

Some of those being checked by investigators this winter were involved with Brimberry in various corporations other than Stix, including local firms.

They and others say their names and businesses were used by Brimberry as the titles of certain financial and stock accounts without their permission or knowledge.

Court records show Brimberry disavows their protestations of innocence, but he isn't being heard from directly these days.

The next time he surfaces publicly may be at some point in 1982 to give testimony in federal court—or to appear with Weber before a county grand jury.

He must now, and in the future, be utterly honest and complete in his statements, or risk being prosecuted for a bundle of alleged misdeeds instead of a single charge, the IRS explains.

All of which is enough to severely strain many of the friendships Brimberry formed in the 1970's. The associations stood the test of time during that decade and through most of 1981, but friendship may be little evident in 1982, as the evidence and testimony accumulate.

Even if this wasn't wintertime, defending oneself against criminal allegations is said to be a bitterly cold and lonely experience.

There was a maximum penalty on the most serious of the possible charges, it is thought he could face up to six years in prison.

Short, an assistant federal attorney in St. Louis for two and a half years before being appointed U.S. attorney in May 1976, remained in that office until September 1977. As an assistant, he helped probe possible corruption in the St. Louis municipal government.

Short says he has not seen the agreement with Brimberry but has heard that it may involve a willfully false document charge, with a probable three-year sentence. He calls this a minor response by the federal government to a major tax case.

Those involved in the pending prosecution include U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Dittmeyer of the St. Louis district and Assistant U.S. Attorney Clifford J. Proud of the East St. Louis district.

Brimberry, who rose from clerk to senior vice-president in charge of operations, has said he used phony stock certificates and other methods to avoid detection of thefts from private investment accounts at Stix.

Some of those being checked by investigators this winter were involved with Brimberry in various corporations other than Stix, including local firms.

They and others say their names and businesses were used by Brimberry as the titles of certain financial and stock accounts without their permission or knowledge.

Court records show Brimberry disavows their protestations of innocence, but he isn't being heard from directly these days.

State employment is down by 1,264

State Comptroller Roland W. Burris reported Tuesday that there were 116,907 employees on the State payroll in November, a decrease of 1,264 from the previous month.

Burris says the November decrease was due to a temporary switch by the University of Illinois in paying Chicago Medical Center employees from locally-held funds instead of state funds, and because of a decrease in the number of student employees at the Champaign campus.

Most other state educational institutions showed an increase in employees in November. Overall, the higher education payroll decreased 1,211 in November while the regular State payroll decreased by 53.

Changes by major group were: constitutional officers and courts, down 21, or .2 percent, code departments, down 35, or .1 percent, major commissions, up four, or .1 percent, and miscellaneous agencies, down one, or .05 percent.

Payrolls for all agencies totaled $167,375,117, a decrease of $885,387, or .5 percent, from October. Payrolls for all agencies, except educational institutions, were $117,337,468, an increase of $743,168, or .5 percent.

The number of employees in November, 1981, was 6,865 less than in November, 1980. Educational institutions decreased by 3,818. Total payroll costs for all State agencies increased by $5,200,581, or up 3.7 percent, from November, 1980, to November, 1981.

GC debt

Explaining the $900,000 projected deficit in December, Miklovic said part of that money should have gone to a self-insured workmen's compensation reserve plan, intended to provide for on-the-job accidents. The city presently is $136,000 behind in payments for the plan it is already using. The amount would be needed for an "immediate catch-up" of the fund.

Miklovic said another $500,000 of "accounting flexibility" consists of sick leave money that will be owed to city employees when they retire. Approximately half of the city's workforce is over the age of 40.

The half-million dollar sum has been earned through accumulated sick leave days of city employees. Miklovic said city firefighters and policemen can collect a maximum of 126 sick-leave days and receive 50 percent of that upon retirement. Firefighters and policemen are eligible to retire at 50, after 20 years of service. All other city employees can collect 90 sick-leave days and collect 50 percent of that after retirement. He said 86 percent of all employees have accumulated maximum amounts.

Both Aldermen Fisk and Alderman Mac Warfield of the Sixth Ward praised the report by the city's comptroller. The value of the newly-created comptroller position had been a controversial subject for several months.

Seek volunteers for AID program

AID Inc. of Collinsville, a non-profit drug abuse prevention program, is seeking volunteers to help youth who are caught in the trap of drug and alcohol abuse.

Like most organizations, AID continues to exist only through adding new members. Persons willing to help someone in need, and be a part of AID's family, are invited to participate in the next volunteer training program beginning Jan. 12. Volunteers at AID learn to counsel with people who call on the hotline or come into the Drop In Center. They also help with planning activities and programs for young people.

The philosophy of AID is to be accepting, non-judgmental, and supportive.

18 state scholars at North High School

Eighteen Granite City High School North students have been named Illinois State Scholars, according to William E. Breidenbach, coordinator pupil personnel services.

Of the 38,000 students that applied for this honor, nearly 10,000 met the qualifications. According to Breidenbach, all students that applied to the North received the award.

State scholar selections are made on the basis of the student's college admission test scores and rank in high school class. This high school achievement and test score combination indicates that the state scholar has high potential for success in college.

North Illinois State Scholars are Catherine R. Breidenbach, Katherine E. Bronsman, Richard D. Brown, Tim S. Fader, Joel R. Hubert, Candice M. Lynn, Ethyl N. M. Mass, Mary McWhorter, Michael A. Mercer.

Scott A. Morton, David E. Rowden, Eric E. Schrader, John J. Sobol, Beverly J. Tester, Melissa D. Travis, M. M. Trimmer, Kimberly S. Woodward.

Trio Unit plans future programs

Trio Unit of Madison County Home Extension, held a monthly meeting at Hope Lutheran Church with 23 members and one guest, Mrs. Elizabeth Romine, present. A dessert luncheon was served by the hostesses Lucy Stuart and Norine Byrd.

Chairman Pat Mitchell called the meeting to order followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

The major lesson for this month was "Taxi Supporting Community Services," which was given by Ruth Brave and Louise Anderson.

Lucille Sackett, second vice-chairman, called attention to those whose dues are not paid and announced the unit will have 41 members and one sustaining member, and Florence Rapp gave the treasurer's report.

Vivian Forabee, health and safety chairman, read a paper on "Close Encounters at Railroad Crossings," written by Arline Brinkmeyer. She gave hints and ideas to keep in mind before traveling over a railroad crossing.

Helen Towne, cultural arts chairman, said the Trio Unit was the banner contest. The Banner was designed by Mrs. Bernice Rodgers. She also noted the craft lesson was to be on stained glass and tin punching.

Mrs. Mitchell informed the unit that they had been asked to serve the luncheon for the Kick-Off for new members in February. Ruth Brave will be chairman of this event, she added.

In lieu of a Christmas gift exchange the unit brought canned goods which were divided among three families. Auretta Santagato and Helen Roessner thanked the group for their contribution.

Ruth Brave, 4-H chairman, announced there would be a "Food Feud" Jan. 30, and Mrs. Mitchell noted H.E.A. Week would be Feb. 21-27, in Champaign, March 16-18 and the annual achievement meeting in Highland, April 29. January 20th has been set for the Program Planning session. Naomi Chapman, recreation chairman, conducted a unique game of searching your purse. Prizes were awarded to Marie Durbin and Ada Matras.

membership waiting list and that has motivated the members to help with organizing other posts, even in other specialty areas.

Six lodge chiefs of the Cahokia Lodge, Order of the Arrow, the national honor camping society within the Boy Scouts of America, have been members of Post 10-4.

The post has been credited with helping numerous pre-delinquent and delinquent youths by giving them a new sense of direction through friendship, encouragement and positive self-direction.

The post meets the second and fourth Wednesdays of each week at 7:30 p.m. in the Madison City Hall. Visitors are always welcome, a spokesman said.

Post meetings include specialized training in numerous law enforcement areas such as crime detection and reporting, patrol methods, traffic control, firearms safety and marksmanship, drugs, vice, search and seizure.

Speakers from local, county, state and federal law enforcement agencies also attend the meetings, in addition to speakers from related areas, such as railroad security, retail security and the practice of law.

Leaders of the post are proud of their "cadre," consisting of more than 70 former members who are willing to help when called upon.

The post advisor, Madison Police Officer William "Bill" Weidner, was the first member of the post to become a commissioned police officer.

Weidner joined the post during the first year of the post operation when he was only 14 years of age. He joined, as he said, for "fun" with no serious intention of becoming a police officer. He now holds a bachelor's degree in law enforcement.

Mike Hilberry, a former post president, is now a lawyer and is the assistant city attorney for Madison.

Bruce Rotter, former post president and now a senior in dental school at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, was the first Area Explorer chairman in the history of the post.

The Explorers have been hosted by over a four-state area and 12,000 Explorers.

The post members have seen much of the United States as their summer trips have taken them to Washington, D.C., three times, Daytona Beach, Texas, Colorado, Mexico, and other locations.

The Explorers have been hosted by the Secret Service, the FBI, the national Drug Enforcement Agency, and even the C.I.A., on numerous trips to D.C.

Although the Explorers try to support themselves as much as possible, they are helped frequently by their sponsors, Police Unit 110 and numerous supporters in the area who have recognized the value of the organization.

The Explorers may never have helped the Red Cross with blood drives, collecting for the American Cancer Society, United Way, and the Lions Club candy sales to help the blind.

The Explorers may never have really helped a "little old lady across the street," but they have painted a house for an elderly poor lady, with the city buying the paint and the Explorers doing the work. They also have conducted numerous clean-up drives in the area. The young men also help in the elementary schools.

Through the years, the Explorers have been directly credited with assisting in the apprehension of felons and the stopping of burglaries by being alert citizens, knowing what to do and not being afraid to become involved.

The leaders of the post work hard in finding jobs for the members, stressing loyalty to their employer and dependability.

Side activities for the post include numerous camping and canoeing trips. Like most young adults, the members are interested in autos. The post took first place trophies in 1977 and 1979 International Auto Shows in St. Louis.

The post members have seen much of the United States as their summer trips have taken them to Washington, D.C., three times, Daytona Beach, Texas, Colorado, Mexico, and other locations.

Members of Post 10-4 played active roles in the 1979 and 1981 National Law Enforcement Conference.

Honorary members of the post include U.S. Congressman Melvin Price, Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight, former FBI Director Clarence Kelly, the late "Mr. Scouting" of the Cahokia Mound Council, G. Rollin Henn, and veteran local scout Ted Scrum, all of whom have played direct roles in furthering and helping Explorer Post 10-4.

During the year, lasting friendships have developed between post members and many have become related by dating various members' sisters and then getting married.

The 1981 Granite City Rotary exchange student, Gerry Yabut from the Republic of the Philippines, was a very active member of the post and continues correspondence with post members and leaders.

The seven charter youth members in 1969 were J. Richard Hooks, first post president, and his brother Thomas Hooks, both from Venice at that time, who helped with the initial organization; Bob Scott, Theodore Narvez, Bill Fox, Roger Banks, and Ray Clemens, all of Madison.

The post is proud of the fact that many members entered various phases of law enforcement, private security, law, and have assumed leadership roles for positive citizenship.

'Open meetings'

"Some of the more common failings (in some Illinois communities) include:

"1.—Failure to cite in the minutes a specific reason for holding a closed meeting. Boards must protect themselves by making the minutes show that the closed meeting is for one of the lawful purposes provided for in the Act. The amendments require the board to vote on a motion to close a meeting."

"2.—Going into a closed session to discuss personnel. This is not among the topics that may be discussed in closed meetings."

"However, the law provides exceptions for certain specific topics related to personnel, such as collective bargaining matters; to consider information regarding appointment, employment or dismissal of any employee or officer (an individual, not a group); or to hear testimony on a complaint lodged against an employee or officer."

"3.—Discussing the sale of school property. The law permits a public body to discuss acquisition of real property in a closed meeting, but the sale of real property is not exempted from the open meeting requirement."

"4.—Meeting with an attorney to discuss any or all legal matters."

"The Act does not permit a public body to automatically close all meetings with an attorney. Closed meetings are permissible only to discuss litigation when such litigation is either filed and pending, or when it can reasonably be considered probable or imminent."

The IASB spokesman pointed out that the revised law covers "any gathering of a majority of a quorum of the members of a public body held for the purpose of discussing public business. For a seven-member board of education, a majority of a quorum (four) would be three members. The Act also applies to all board committees."

"The attorney general has written that a chance encounter can lead to a violation, if a discussion among a majority of a quorum turns to school business."

"The safest course for school board members is to avoid discussing school business with more than one colleague at any time other than at a legal meeting."

"School business should probably be defined to mean anything that might reasonably come before the public body for a decision at some time in the future."

"A majority of a quorum might reasonably talk about the school's latest basketball game, as fans. If such a discussion might turn out to have a bearing on the future employment of the coach, however, then the discussion could become illegal and expose the discussants to criminal or civil action."

"Our best advice is to be pure of mind and to sleep easily. Refuse to talk about school business with other members of

"The only change in the substance of public notices is that the notice must now include an agenda for any special, reconvened or re-scheduled meeting, open or closed."

"The purpose of the minutes of closed meetings is to show what happened, not what was said."

"Minutes of board committee meetings, open or closed, must be recorded and approved by the committee and treated as any other board minutes."

"Minutes of closed meetings can and should be kept confidential. They will be available to the public only after the public body determines that it is no longer necessary to protect the public interest or the privacy of an individual by keeping them confidential."

"In the enforcement section, a paragraph authorizes the circuit court to declare null and void any final action taken at a closed session in violation of the Open Meetings Act."

"Any person can bring a civil action in court within 45 days after the meetings alleged to be in violation of this Act."

"In response to a civil action, a court may issue an order directing that a meeting be open to the public, issue an injunction against future violations, order the public body to make public the minutes of any illegally closed meeting, or grant such equitable relief as it deems appropriate."

Cooper, Stoller to report to prison; exam of Maeras ordered

Former Madison County Sheriff John Maeras of Madison has been ordered to have an independent physical examination and two persons convicted with him in federal court have been ordered to report Jan. 29 to begin serving their prison terms.

The orders were issued Tuesday by U.S. District Judge J. Waldo Ackerman after he was told that a medical authority has said that Maeras is expected to live only about two months longer.

U.S. Attorney Gerald Fines, who conducted federal prosecution of Maeras and two co-defendants, asked that the judge select an independent physician to examine Maeras before he is ordered to begin serving his 15-year prison term.

Dr. Shabbir H. Safdar, associate professor of clinical medicine at Washington University in St. Louis, sent a letter to Fines saying that Maeras has lost 70 pounds in the last three months "and is rapidly going downhill."

Fines noted that a doctor testified in the summer of 1979 that Maeras had only six months to live.

Bruce Cook, attorney for Maeras, said at Tuesday's hearing that Maeras has undergone brain surgery and has had a lung removed. The cancer has spread to Maeras' liver, Cook told the court.

Orders for Maeras to begin serving his term were withheld by Judge Ackerman until he sees the report from the independent physician on the health of the former sheriff.

However, Judge Ackerman set a date of Jan. 29 for Maeras' former chief of field operations, John Cooper of Granite City and fund-raiser Leland Stoller of Nashville, Tenn., to report to prisons selected by federal prison authorities.

Cooper has been sentenced to serve 15 years in prison for his part in an alleged RICO (Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization) scheme involving payoffs and kickbacks from tow truck operators, prostitutes and taverns and for allegedly "scrimming" a portion of the funds raised by Lee Stoller Enterprises, which conducted fund-raising events and dances for the now-defunct Madison County Deputy Sheriff's Association.

Stoller, husband of popular Country & Western star Cristy Lane, has been ordered to serve three years in prison for allegedly cooperating in payoffs to the ex-sheriff and others.

All three appealed their convictions, first to the U.S. Appeals Court in Chicago and then to the U.S. Supreme Court, which last month declined to consider their requests for retrials or modification of their sentences.

American Steel annual report shows downturn

American Steel Foundries' (ASF) Granite City plant produced castings at a much lower level during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1981, compared with previous years, the company announced Monday.

Production and shipments of finished products were significantly below the record set in 1979 and the lowest since 1973.

William P. Donovan, works manager, said that the lower production level resulted from a continuing decrease in demand for freight car castings, especially during the second half of the year. The decreased demand is being caused by the depressed general economy, high interest rates and the record building of freight cars in the late 1970s and 1980.

According to industry sources, the number of freight cars ordered in 1981 was the lowest in more than 20 years.

Although the business downturn caused reduced employment, ASF continues as a major factor in the economy of the Granite City area — wages, salaries and employee benefits amounted to $35 million for 1981. Currently, a large percentage of the work force remains on layoff.

During 1981, $11 million was invested for plant improvements. Most were part of a multi-million dollar expansion started in 1979 and expected to be completed in 1982. This program includes the construction of a new molding line in the foundry, an expanded Core Department, a 90,000-square-foot building for finishing side frames and a 30,000-square-foot storage facility.

ASF is proceeding with the expansion, even though product demand has declined significantly. Donovan said he expects the long-term need for railroad Courts terminate 4,871 cases in Nov.

The volume of pending cases in Circuit Court, Third Judicial Circuit (Madison and Bond counties), decreased during November by 24 cases and progress was made in the most time-consuming division, large law cases requiring a jury, where a gain of 48 cases was noted, according to the monthly report released Wednesday.

"It was a very productive month," said Madison County Circuit Clerk Willard Portell, "especially in the cases of jury over $15,000 where 48 were filed and 96 were terminated for a substantial gain. Also in the felony division, where 58 cases were filed and 78 were terminated."

Overall, 4,847 cases were filed for this month and 4,871 were terminated, for a small gain. The only loss of any amount was in the traffic, which are not time-consuming cases.

The chief judge, Joseph J. Barr, and the circuit clerk are satisfied with this report, Portell concluded.

Following are the numbers of each major type of case filed, terminated and pending at the end of September.

Of the felony defendants whose cases were terminated during the month, 48 were convicted, 25 had their cases dismissed or consolidated with other cases, none were reduced to misdemeanors, 12 were convicted of lesser included misdemeanors and five others were acquitted.

Guilty pleas during the month included three to Class X felonies, one for a Class One felony, 14 for Class Two felonies, 22 for Class Three felonies and six for Class Four felonies. Juries found two guilty of Class X felonies during the month. They were the only felony convictions by juries.

Sue county to stop multiplier on farms

By JUDY TAPLIN
A class action suit was filed this week against Madison County and its top assessing officials to stop further application of urban multipliers on farm out-buildings.

The suit was filed in Madison County Circuit Court by Caseyville attorney Mark Levy for more than 3,000 owners of farmland in the county.

The 16 directors of the Madison County Farm Bureau, including president Richard Bauer, are listed as plaintiffs, as representatives of a class.

Defendants named are Supervisor of Assessment James Barton; Robert Harris, Shirley Voegelé and Fred Finck, members of the Board of Review, and Madison County.

The complaint alleges that Barton and the Board of Review are illegally applying the market value-based urban multipliers to farm out-buildings.

This use is contrary to state law, the complaint contends. In Illinois, farm land is now assessed on the basis of productivity. Urban real estate, and farm homes, are assessed based on market value.

The Farmland Assessment Act, upheld by the state Supreme Court, prohibits urban multipliers on farm land.

The complaint notes this, and says state law also requires farm out-buildings to be assessed as part of a farm, based upon their contributions to the productivity of the farm operation.

Despite legal advice from Madison County State's Attorney Don Weber and the Illinois Department of Revenue, and despite the results of a previous class action suit filed in October, 1981, Barton and the Board of Review have indicated they will continue to apply the urban multiplier to farm out-buildings, the complaint says.

It said a class action seeking a declaratory judgment is the only practical method of ending the controversy.

"We're asking a judge to sit them down and explain the law to them—since they won't listen to the state's attorney or the Department of Revenue," Levy told The Herald.

Barton and Board of Review members several months ago said they had received a letter from Dale Yung of the Department of Revenue supporting their use of the multiplier for farm out-buildings.

But the complaint contains a July 1, 1980, memorandum from James Zigel, director of the Department of Revenue, to county supervisors of assessments in which he notes the Illinois Supreme Court ruling prohibiting urban multipliers on farm improvements other than farm dwellings.

The October suit mentioned in the complaint was also filed on behalf of all farmers in Madison County, minus the district plus $45,000, in passenger fares, $2,000 from charters, $40,000 in non-transportation revenue, $997,000 cash grants and reimbursements, $9,000 in auxiliary transportation revenue and $972,000 in federal grants and reimbursements.

The current lawsuit concerns itself with the tax year 1981 and future years. The complaint alleges that the removal of the Illinois tax and correction of the 1980 tax bills cost Madison County in excess of $20,000 in clerical expenses.

Levy, who has filed similar, but not identical, suits for taxpayers in St. Clair, Montgomery, Monroe and Fayette counties, says he has been told the actual amount of overcharges for 1980 taxes averaged about $19 per farmer.

The amount was substantially more for some; for others the overcharge was as little as $3, he said.

Levy says Madison County is the only county in Illinois to apply an urban multiplier to farm property.

6-month bus pact in county

A January-June 1982 mass transit contract with the Bi-State Development Agency was approved Monday by the Madison County Transit District board. Estimated cost to the district is $532,000.

"It's about the same as before. But we did not have a strict accounting of all available revenues before, and now we do," District Manager Susan Schold said.

"I'm satisfied with the contract," District Chairman William Haine said. "We obtained some language we wanted, and we extracted as much as we could from Bi-State."

"We want to maintain an efficient level of bus service, and control over the changes. We want less cost to the taxpayer, and improvement in the mass transportation system itself."

With this, the county will be paying for what it actually costs to place the bus system in Madison County, minus the revenue generated from all sources, including the state of Illinois.

The estimated cost to Bi-State for providing the service is $2,607,000. Offsetting this, a revenue breakdown shows the county will receive $45,000 from the district plus $45,000, in passenger fares, $2,000 from charters, $40,000 in non-transportation revenue, $997,000 cash grants and reimbursements, $9,000 in auxiliary transportation revenue and $972,000 in federal grants and reimbursements.

A third man, allegedly the bus driver, took the wallet from Evans and then ordered him off the bus at 18th and State streets, the victim informed officers.

Police said Evans was unhurt and "apparently no weapon was displayed. An investigation was continuing today."

Governor forms task force on children

Governor James R. Thompson has announced that he is forming the Governor's Task Force on Children, a panel he is appointing to study and report on various areas of child care, services and policies.

"In Illinois, our efforts to improve the care for the children of this state can never be enough. While the Thompson administration has made great strides in this area, it is also committed to improving our children's environment and care," the governor said.

"The Governor's Task Force on Children is just one step in meeting that goal. Its diverse membership is a representative group of people specializing in children's services and policy, making it more than qualified to comment on the issues involved," he said.

The 18-member Task Force will address areas such as child support payments, protective services to prevent child abuse and neglect, teenage pregnancy, prenatal and postnatal care, needs standards and public assistance, as well as information taken from several other resources, such as the White House Conference on Families Report and the 1981 Conference on Children's Priorities for the 80's.

The Governor also said that Janet Otwell, an Evanston resident and former member of the Employment and Security Advisory Board, will serve as coordinator for the task force. Her salary will be $30,000 per year.

Also named to the Task force are: Adrienne D. Kraft, executive director of St. Mary's Services, Chicago; Jeanne M. Foley, professor and chairman of the Department of Psychology at Loyola University of Chicago; Jeanette Bitter, president of the board of directors for United Way of Adams County; Hugh Rohner, director of the Peoria City and County Health Department; and president-elect of the Illinois Public Health Association.

Also Paul Davis, a member of the Title XX Advisory Council, Department of Public Aid; Carol Christiansen, vice-chairman of the Advisory Council for the Illinois School for the Visually Impaired; Reuben Jessop, executive director of United Way of Metropolitan Chicago; Edward C. Jacobs, scout executive in the Chicago Area Council, Boy Scouts of America; Effie O. Ellis, consultant to the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, Chicago Department of Human Services; Barbara Hicks of Decatur; P. Ronald Ealy, an Effingham lawyer and Muriel Amanda Tuttle, administrator of the Day Care and Health Center for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, Chicago. Belle Plummer of Shelbyville; Laurence Hall, board member of Comprehensive Community Services of Metropolitan Chicago; Judy Block of Chicago; Donald Muirhead of Decatur; John Gray II, vice president of Peoria's W.

D. Boyce Boy Scouts Council, Peoria and Mickie Silverstein of the League of Women Voters, Chicago. The task force, which will meet quarterly, with the first meeting set for today in Springfield. Task force subcommittees will meet as needed. The task force will operate from January, 1982, through June, 1983. A final report then will be submitted to the governor.

Red Cross seeks funds for Poland

The American Red Cross has issued an appeal for funds to help low-income elderly and young children in Poland, due to current events in that strife-torn country.

The action was taken following a call by the League of Red Cross Societies to its worldwide membership to assist the Polish Red Cross with its relief efforts, now hampered by difficult conditions in the country.

The International Committee of the Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Society representatives are in Poland and working with the Polish Red Cross on relief operations. Harsh winter weather and the current conditions have affected more than 10,000 low-income, almost 20,000 underprivileged children and some 60,000 infants born monthly.

American Red Cross national headquarters is making an initial donation of $100,000 for this relief effort. The funds will be used to purchase food, clothing, blankets and other items for shipment to Red Cross warehouses in seven Polish cities for distribution to the people.

The league is seeking in excess of $11 million to assist the Polish Red Cross in its work. Persons wishing to contribute to this relief effort may make checks payable to the American Red Cross, earmarked, "Polish Emergency Relief."

Miss Gwen O'Guin, director of the local chapter of the Red Cross, urges those who can give to send the checks to the Tri-City Chapter of the American Red Cross at 3700 N. Main St., Granite City, Ill., 62040. Miss O'Guin stated that the local chapter cannot accept gifts in kind, such as food and clothing, as transportation costs are prohibitive and delivery uncertain.

Murder attempt charge is filed

Charged with attempted murder and with armed violence in a New Year's Eve shooting, William Javaux, 26, of 2215 Newell Drive, Granite City, was transferred Tuesday to the Madison County Jail in Edwardsville.

At a preliminary hearing before Associate Judge P. J. O'Neill in Granite City at 4 p.m. Monday, the bond for Javaux was set at $100,000. He was taken into custody by Granite City police on New Year's Eve when Ronald Mathis, 35, of 524 Main St., Dupu, was shot in the head at 11:30 p.m. Dec. 31 in the Coral Lounge, 3394 rear Nantux Road.

Wounded by a bullet fired from a .25-caliber pistol, striking him just above the right eye, Mathis was in satisfactory condition this week at Firmin Desloge Hospital, St. Louis.

The lounge was crowded with New Year's revelers at the time the shooting occurred. Accounts of what happened vary slightly, but it is believed that the two men were not acquainted with each other.

Javaux is said to have become angry at another person, who left the lounge. Javaux then is said to have threatened to "kill someone" while a friend tried to dissuade him from committing any violent act.

Seminar at YMCA on positive thinking

Positive thinking will be stressed by F.N. "Redd" Storey, general manager of the Dale Carnegie Institute of St. Louis, during two free "Positive Thinking Seminars and Rallies" being sponsored by the Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, Jan. 13.

"Start your year right by getting yourself in a positive frame of mind for the challenges of 1982," suggests David Knollman, president of the Chamber, in inviting everyone from the Quad-City area to attend.

"Learn how to cope with this constantly changing world. Find the real meaning of motivation," Knollman also suggested.

Storey has been inspiring audiences for 30 years and has been associated with Dale Carnegie Courses since 1948. He has trained thousands of men and women in management, salesmanship, public speaking and human relations.

He also has addressed conventions, sales meetings, civic clubs and seminars all over the United States. Storey is known for a personal technique of communication with audiences. A powerful speaker, he makes use of the principals that inspire and motivate audiences, Knollman said.

He has served as a sales manager, traffic and personnel manager, plant manager and president of various companies. He has personally trained many of the country's leading business executives and is well aware of the responsibilities and problems facing individuals and companies, Knollman added.

He will be assisted by Del Davis, area manager for the Carnegie Institute.

Identical seminars will be held from 11:30 to noon and 12:30 to 1 p.m. next Wednesday. Residents are invited to select the seminar which best meets their schedules.

Method for children to fight stress

What are "Fifty Flits," "Magic Breathing Holes," and "Finger Balloons"? They're parts of a relaxation exercise now being used in many classrooms. The technique is a form of biofeedback. It is described in publications of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Children do simple exercises, such as pulling air into their bodies through imaginary Magic Breathing Holes, to learn to relax so that they can increase their concentration.

The program helps youngsters discriminate between positive and negative sensations in their bodies. It is based on a relaxation concept called the quieting reflex — QR.

QR is being used in classrooms with healthy children and also in treating children who suffer from stress-related symptoms like migraine headaches, high blood pressure and stomach disorders.

The goal of QR is to reverse the internal changes that occur when a person is in a stressful situation, such as alarm or fear.

Under stress, the body's alarm system causes raised blood pressure, braced muscles, clenched teeth and sharpened vision.

All are fine when needed — but too much stress can result in muscle tension, high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol and stomach upsets.

Through biofeedback, people attempt to adjust their body's reaction to stress. Doctors working in the field found that children mastered the relaxation skills more easily than adults, so they have put this knowledge to work in helping children handle everyday stressful situations.

Currently, 450 to 600 school districts across the country are using "Kiddie QR" regularly in the classroom.

Educators say the pupils quickly learn to distinguish between an action situation, such as getting to class on time, and the need for a calmer but equally alert response, like concentrating on a math problem.

The AAAS says Kiddie QR may prove to be more than a good way to calm down before the big tests. It now being tested with cerebral palsy patients, as well as with gifted, hyperactive, and abused children.

GC unemployment at 16.1 percent

Unemployment in Granite City declined only slightly in November, but then so did the number in the available labor force, according to preliminary unemployment figures released yesterday by the Illinois Department of Labor.

According to R.L. Worden of the research and analysis section, the number of persons seeking work in Granite City dropped from 3,256 in the final October, 1981 figures, to 3,159 in preliminary November figures. However, the available labor force (including those employed) in the city decreased from 20,091 in October to 10,940, Worden's figures show.

The number of Granite City residents working dropped from 16,837 to 16,451 in the same period, according to the study.

The unemployment rate, therefore, declined from 16.2 percent to 16.1 percent from October to November, still, by far, the highest percentage out of work of any of the four major cities in the seven-county district.

Belleville is next highest with unemployment of 11.8 percent. Alton follows with 11.1 percent and East St. Louis unemployment is at 11 percent, according to Worden's preliminary figures.

The local unemployment rate is substantially higher than the average of 10.7 percent in Madison County or the 9.9 percent in the seven-county area.

It is estimated that the workforce in Madison County declined from 118,704 to 115,445 from October to November, while the number unemployed declined from 13,146 to 12,416.

The counties showing the highest unemployment of the seven are Jersey and Calhoun counties with an average of 11.3 percent each. Madison County is third, followed by Clinton at 10.1 percent, St. Clair at 9.5 percent, Bond at 8.9 percent and Monroe with 7 percent unemployment.

In the entire seven county region, the unemployment rate dropped from 10.2 percent in October to 9.9 percent in November, the labor bureau's figures indicate. It is estimated that of 268,663 eligible workers, 26,326 were seeking work in November.

BARGE FUEL TAX

It could cost farmers millions

SPRINGFIELD — Two University of Illinois agricultural economists have warned that proposed increases in the federal tax on barge fuel could cost farmers and other users of barge transportation as much as $103 million yearly by 1985.

The figure, say Dennis Conley and Lowell Hill, is based on a $1.10 per gallon increase which has been estimated as the amount needed to recover costs of operating and maintaining new facilities, and constructing new facilities, on all U.S. inland waterways.

In a preliminary report of a study they are conducting, the economists say any additional fuel costs probably will be passed on to the farmer, and to shippers of fertilizer, petroleum and other energy sources such as coal.

The current barge fuel tax, one cent a gallon, was imposed in October of 1980 with the tax slated to increase, gradually, to 30 cents by 1985. However, ten cents a gallon is not expected to cover all the cost of operating and maintaining the nation's inland waterways, Conley said.

Estimates of the actual money requirements have ranged from 30 cents to as much as $1.10 a gallon. At $1.10 a gallon, Conley and Hill project it would cost each farm unit an average of $1,500, or about 65 percent of its net farm income, based on the 1975-79 average income figures.

The researchers say the increased tax would mean lower grain prices and higher petroleum and fertilizer prices for farmers.

The annual cost of operating and maintaining the Illinois River rose from $3 million to $20 million from 1977 to 1980, the pair said, while in the same period the total costs on the Upper Mississippi River rose from $54 million to $189 million, including $19 million for lock and dam at Alton.

Increased barge costs probably would also increase railroad rates, the pair said, with supply-and-demand raising water-competitive rail rates as barge rates go up in response to fuel cost increases.

The study was commissioned by various barge-user groups, to assess the economic impact on the nation's agriculture and agribusiness. Another study dealing with the impact on petroleum and other energy sources is being done at Southern Illinois University.

Mehelic sues trustees at Nameoki for his pay

Frank Mehelic, highway commissioner of Nameoki Township, has filed suit in Madison County Circuit Court seeking an order forcing the township trustees to pay him his per diem for 365 days a year.

The suit was filed Dec. 31 by Attorney H. Carl Runge. The complaint says Mehelic's compensation for the current fiscal year was established March 31, 1980, at $45 per day, but that the board failed to appropriate sufficient funds to pay the road commissioner after April 1, 1981.

The complaint notes that at a special meeting Dec. 21, the board refused to transfer money from a contingency fund, to pay Mehelic.

The road commissioner is now working seven days a week, without pay, the complaint said.

Named in the lawsuit are the town board, and trustees Helen Hawkins, Lee Adams and Don Wilson, individually and in their capacity as trustees. A fourth trustee, Joe Garcia, and Township Supervisor Harry Briggs had sided with Mehelic in the pay dispute. Mrs. Hawkins, Adams and Wilson did not feel that Mehelic should be paid for 365 days of the year.

A writ of mandamus is sought to force the board to provide Mehelic with his just compensation for seven days a week for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Township officials' concern questioned

By MICK STRANGE

According to a spokesman for the Madison Fire Department, the people in Nameoki Township are very concerned about having fire protection, but contend that the township officials don't share their views.

The amount of non-payment for fire calls to Nameoki Township homes is reportedly in excess of $19,000.

Several Madison aldermen expressed views at the Tuesday night council meeting that it seems unfair for the taxpayers of Madison to assume the costs of fire calls to Nameoki Township.

MFD fire officials state they have been answering fire calls for 25 years without getting paid for it, with the exception of a few businesses that have signed contracts for fire protection, and a few citizens.

The 1981 MFD report given to the council Tuesday listed 29 fire calls to Nameoki Township, 10 of which were paid for by two businesses, false alarms. Bills are pending on 17 of the calls.

The charge for a fire call outside the city limits is $500. City officials sent a registered letter two weeks ago to Nameoki Township Supervisor Harry Briggs informing him that after Jan. 31, 1982, the Madison Fire Department will make no more fire calls to Nameoki Township, except for the businesses that have signed contracts with Madison for fire protection.

MFD Capt. Mike Mack said, "The businesses have continued to enter into contracts for fire protection. We have had several calls the past two weeks from township residents and I refer them to the township officials."

Madison has signed "mutual aid" agreements with Granite City, Venice City and Venice Township, pledging to assist those areas. If additional firefighting equipment or manpower are needed.

It was further noted that Nameoki Township Supervisor Harry Briggs had not replied officially to the certified letter, except in an informal conversation with Mack.

Briggs said in an interview Tuesday, "There is no way we can pay for the fire calls." He went on to state that any five registered voters in an area can petition the Illinois Fire Marshal and then the fire marshal will assign that area to a fire district.

Madison fire officials stated that, although there is an Eagle Park fire district, Madison is not obligated, under any mutual aid pact, to answer assistance calls from the Eagle Park Fire District.

Briggs said he plans to appoint a committee of 10 or 12 citizens to form a fire district.

A vote for the district would have to be held and trustees appointed, after which the trustees could contract with a neighboring fire department for fire protection.

It was noted at the council meeting that Venice Township has helped the Madison Fire Department on several occasions with the purchase of equipment, but that Nameoki Township has never helped the MFD in any way.

Venice Township also is paying Madison for fire calls when the victims are unable to pay.

The major areas of concern are the East Madison and Cloverleaf Subdivision areas.

In other council business, Madison Mayor Mike Sasyk reported that the Illinois Public Action organization will be conducting a survey in Madison.

He noted that it is a non-profit organization and will be given one week to conduct the survey and solicit funds during daylight hours.

Sasyk stressed that, although the organization is legal, it is not sanctioned in any way by the city.

Workers will have photo identifications. It was noted that citizens are under no legal obligation to contribute money or give information.

None of the Madison aldermen had ever heard of Illinois Political Action.

Following a meeting with the Madison Business Association and the Madison-Venice Rotary Club Mayor Sasyk said that the one-hour parking limit on Madison Avenue needs to be enforced to provide better parking in the business area.

He said new signs will be erected, the police will give warning tickets for one week and then will issue citations after that.

One alderman commented that he feels several persons are parking their cars on Madison Avenue or near it and riding a bus to work in St. Louis, leaving their autos parked all day.

Mayor Sasyk said the MBA has agreed to help with the landscaping of the property at the corner of Fourth Street and Madison Avenue, recently given to the city by members of the Schermer family.

On a motion by Alderman Donald Garrett, seconded by Alderman Elmer Smith, condemnation proceedings were started on a structure at 909 Jefferson St., following the recommendation of Curtis King Sr., assistant building inspector.

Mayor Sasyk complimented the work of John Dutko and King in the inspection of buildings and homes. "I feel one reason our fires are so few within the city is due in a large part to the way our building inspectors do their job under housing codes," Sasyk said.

The council accepted a bid by Southwest Steel Supply Co. for the purchase of two small sections in the Maers Industrial Park for the amount of $35,000. The council has put the property up for bid twice and Southwest Steel has been the only bidder.

On the recommendation of the city's zoning board, approval was given Tarias Meat Co. to erect a 44 by 44-foot building for vehicle repairs.

A question was raised in regard to a house at 919 Franklin St. owned by Johnny Grant. Grant has requested a permit to build two rooms that were destroyed by a fire several years ago and to renovate three other rooms. The request will be reviewed by the zoning board and a recommendation will be made to the council at a future date.

Mayor Sasyk reminded the council members that the official presentation of the 1982 Madison vehicle license to J. Richard Hooks, first president of Explorer Post 10-4 was to take place this morning in the Madison Memorial Center.

Mayor Sasyk made several comments on the value of the Explorers during the past 12 years to the entire Quad-City area. He noted that the accomplishments of the members, as they become adults, is largely due to their training and experiences with Explorers.

TRAIN HITS CAR ON EDWARDSVILLE ROAD
Crossing lights were flashing at the Edwardsville Road railroad crossing at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday, as they often do for long periods without visible trains. Clarence McMullen, 25, of 1527 Fourth St., Madison, drove west across the tracks but the right side of his auto was struck by the rear of a backward-moving freight car.

Connected to a Granite City Steel engine operated by William Chilcutt, 5172 Lakeview Drive, Pontoon Beach, the rail car had no lights or signals on it, witnesses said. McMullen and his two passengers escaped without injury and his auto was towed away.

MOTORIST INJURED
Susan M. Bennett, 26, of 4201 E. Lake Drive was injured slightly at 10:40 a.m. Tuesday in a collision between the right rear of her pickup truck, southbound from Johnson Road and entering the Bellemore Village Shopping Center, and the front of a Checker Cab being driven northeast on the lot by Rodney Jenkins, Old Monroe, Mo.

County OKs contracts with 3 labor unions

Despite objections that it could be committing itself to labor contracts it might not be able to afford in coming years, the Madison County Board last night approved multi-year contracts with the three labor unions representing county employees.

Contracts approved were: American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) (including sheriff's deputies) — a three-year contract providing a 50-cent an hour base wage increase from Dec. 1, 1981 through Nov. 30, 1982, 40-cent per hour increase in the second year and a wage reopener clause for the third year.

Teamsters Local 335 — (including some highway and animal control department employees) a three-year contract providing a 70-cent per hour increase from Dec. 1, 1981, through Nov. 30, 1982, a 50-cent per hour increase in the second year and a 52-cent per hour increase in the third year, ending Nov. 30, 1984. Also approved was an increase in the county's share of the health and welfare plan.

Phase-in wage percentages were established for probationary employees, until they reach their 270th day of employment. The county will provide two uniforms a year to each employee. The job classification of mechanic is redefined.

Operating Engineers Local 526-C a two-year contract providing an 80-cent per hour increase from Nov. 1, 1981, through Oct. 31, 1982, and a 60-cent per hour increase in the second year.

Phase-in wage percentages for probationary employees. Continuation of the clothing allowance, a sick leave incentive bonus and an expanded definition of seniority. Additional definitions of job classifications by rank and position are included as is a provision for arbitration. The 14-cent per hour which would have been the cost-of-living increase, is devoted to the increased insurance cost with no additional expense to the county.

All three contracts eliminate cost-of-living provisions.

Herbert "Junior" Milton of Granite City, chairman of the county board's negotiating committee, told the board that the committee believes that several significant gains were accomplished during these bargaining sessions, including the elimination of the quarterly cost-of-living increases from all three contracts, the introduction of a percentage pay scale for probationary employees and a limitation on health insurance costs," Milton continued.

The amount of money offered by the negotiating committee for those items considered to be salary financial package (wages and health insurance) is within the limitations as established by the county board for fiscal year 1982.

"In negotiating, the negotiating committee made an assumption the dollar amount of money would be available for fiscal year 1983 and fiscal year 1984. This assumption was presented to the unions with the caveat that, in the event that such funds were not available, due to the declining revenue picture forecast by the county, the county could and would be required to institute measures including the reduction of personnel, hours of work and the like.

"The right of the county to undertake such actions, should they become necessary, is incorporated into clauses on management rights and it was understood by all the unions at the bargaining table," Milton concluded.

The only county board member voting against the three contracts was H. Jack Frandsen, who stated, "We'll be spending money and we don't know where the money will be coming from. I will agree to a no strike contract. If the unions don't want it, that's tough."

Frandsen estimated the increases would cost the county a half-million dollars a year. He noted that $328,000 in federal revenue sharing is devoted in the current year to paying salaries, but it is unclear how much, if any, revenue sharing the county will receive next year.

He said he feared that approval of the new multi-year contracts could result in increased property taxes in the second or third years of the contract, if other sources of funds, such as revenue sharing, dry up.

Milton stressed that the county retains the right to cut back hours or lay off people, "if the funds are not there."

The board then ratified all three contracts.

Retired AF officer buried at Arlington

A funeral service for retired Air Force Lt. Col. John J. Whiteside, who helped organize television coverage of the early manned space flights, was held Dec. 30 in Washington, D.C. Burial was in the Arlington National Cemetery.

Col. Whiteside, 58, died of cancer Friday, Dec. 28, 1981, at the Malcolm Grow Medical Center at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Among the survivors are his widow, Mrs. Frances M. Whiteside of Granite City; a daughter, Linda G. Henman of Charleston, S.C.; a son, J.P. Whiteside of Arlington, Va.; two sisters, Judy Sorgenfrei of Brentwood, Mo., and Pam Beck of Eldorado, Ill.; a brother, Thomas Whiteside of Satellite Beach, Fla., and three grandchildren.

After the war, Col. Whiteside came to St. Louis, where he worked for Loomis Advertising Co., and later became a partner in DeLorenzo, Erskine and Whiteside Advertising.

He was called back to active duty in the Air Force during the Korean War and decided to make a career in the service.

As public information officer of the Eastern Test Range at Patrick Air Force Base in Florida in the early 1960s, Col. Whiteside organized "pool" television coverage of the Mercury and Gemini space flights.

He retired from the military in 1970 as information officer in the New York office of the secretary of the Air Force.

Plans for a Jan. 30 reverse progressive retirement ceremony were finalized at a December business session held in the home of Ruth Hubbard, 2523 Morrison Road. Also discussed was the annual Valentine party in February.

Those attending the St. Louis affair were Cookie White, Jim Shipman, June Carbone, Kenny Bridges, Anastasia Elfert, Helen Hall, Jerry Davis, Joan Pritchard, Jerry and Candy Thompson, Judy Barile, Norma and Barb Hente, Larry and Ruth Hubbard, Marvin and Vicki Thomas.

Hope here for peaceful, prosperous, productive 1982

The start of a new year is a time for summing up. Much happened here in 1981, but the prevailing concern was recession-related unemployment that will be eased in 1982 if Quad-City's New Year hopes are realized.

Nearly all of the negatives have a potentially positive future prospect, if people here and throughout the nation work for improved economic performance, individually and in their companies and governmental bodies.

If productivity can be increased, inflation and interest rates curbed, and more discretionary funds laid with each family, there can be an upsurge in both investments and purchasing, triggering sales, production, hiring and a higher level of prosperity for all.

Layoffs worsened here in 1981, causing real hardships. Amoco mothballed its Wood River refinery, and no takers were found for the idle A. O. Smith auto frame plant. But, aided by federal industrial revenue bonds, more and more manufacturing and fabricating firms are being attracted to the local community. The Precast/Prestressed Concrete Institute traffic overpass and the new Quad-City sanitary sewer system all were placed in use for the first time during the past year—setting the stage for industrial and commercial development along the western edge of the local community as well as along its northern periphery, Interstate Route 270.

The Tri-City Regional Port area also is becoming increasingly attractive for shipping, warehousing and processing activity, bolstered by the presence of Foreign Trade Zone 51.

In line with the Alpine Village theme that symbolizes the Madison Avenue business district in Madison, construction began in 1981 on a "mini" shopping mall at Third Street.

St. Elizabeth Medical Center continued its expansion by dedicating new facilities. High-level support was given for continuation of the School of Dental Medicine of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. And plans were unveiled for residential and business construction on a St. Clair Avenue extension between Maryville Road and Mockingbird Lane.

New attention was focused in 1981 on the need for taxing agencies to reduce their borrowing and to increase their investment of idle funds. This seems certain to become an even bigger issue in 1982 as attempts are made to speed property tax billing, collection and distribution.

Re-elected Mayors Tyrone Echols of Venice, Mike Kozlowski of Edwardsville, and Mayor Harry Beegs returned to that position. Granite City Park Superintendent Harold Brown announced plans to retire.

Voters rejected a Madison home rule proposal. City governmental spending was decreased in Granite City and a municipal account was employed.

With the size of the Illinois House of Representatives to be reduced by 59, from 177 to 118 members, and new state legislative and Congressional district boundaries being drawn, State Rep. Everett Steele said he will not seek reelection in 1982.

Madison High School in 1981 captured statewide championship honors. After five successive years as the Illinois state soccer champion, Granite City High School Soccer relinquished the state crown but remained in Madison County, at Collinsville.

A $36 million stock brokerage scandal involving Quad-City's became the subject of frequent headlines starting in November. Convictions of a former mayor and his aide were upheld. Numerous members of The Company, an international marijuana smuggling conspiracy, either pleaded guilty or were convicted in the U. S. District Court at Alton, with Federal Judge William Beatty Sr. of Granite City presiding.

What lies ahead for the Quad-City area in the new year is always difficult to foresee. But much energy will be expended to assure:

Continued work on the project to build a dam and two new locks two miles downstream from the deteriorating Alton locks and dam.

Implementation of railroad yard relocations here and to the south. Goals include expediting freight shipments to, through and from this metropolitan area and establishing major truck-rail transfer facilities in Venice.

Successful completion of the mammoth new physical education and recreation building on the SIUE campus, plus continued steps to expand student housing.

Further construction of federally-coordinated drainage and runoff facilities in the area.

Increased bus and van-pool commuter services.

Escalation of the pace of highway funding and improvement, with emphasis on the I-270 circumferential road encircling St. Louis, the Quad-Cities, Collinsville and Edwardsville.

Marshalling of local and regional research, labor-management and development teams to seek additional plants, business ventures and employment.

Along with jobs, the Quad-Cities need more homes, motels and meeting facilities and stepped-up buying by consumers and companies. The area is a regional area. While such hopes are tied closely to regional, state and national progress, much also depends on local attitudes, effort, efficiency and innovation.

Nationally, there is fear that the combined "invasions" of illegal drugs and illegal aliens, with related financial manipulations and gangster activity, may create a new Prohibition-like lawless area. New approaches appear to be essential if this is to be avoided; the Quad-Cities already have come up with one of its 50 states, Florida, to an onslaught of robbery, smuggling, money "laundering" and murder.

Quad-City's may be giving thought and prayer in 1982 to the welfare of people throughout the world, with special concern for those who are hungry, and for countries like Poland.

Less than half of all who presently populate the Earth can be accurately classified as living in freedom, lacking control of their rights and the abundance that are almost taken for granted in America.

And unless citizens of the United States "get their act together" and prove they can already handle peace and justice in terms of product price and quality, the key to our abundance—our system of private enterprise—will be in serious jeopardy.

Quad-City's has a long, hard road ahead, warfare, limited or unlimited, also is a cause for worry; domestic issues pale into insignificance, by comparison.

Quad-City's has, as each year, with considerable anxiety and uncertainty, but with knowledge that as children of God we have the potential to surmount all obstacles. Nine and eighty-two have begun and Quad-City's are eager to make the most of it.

Zoning sought for residential care home

To the Editor:

I ask that you print this letter in our local paper. I feel that it does involve many of our local residents. It is very common knowledge that we are closely associated with a small community in Stewart County, Tenn., called Dover. Many of the people in Granite City are from this community or have relatives who now reside there.

Many local residents return there when they grow older. There are two former Granite City residents who did return to Dover four years ago to open Blue Haven Care Home.

This is a residential care home for the aged. By this, we mean a home represented and held out to the general public as a home which accepted aged persons for relatively permanent, domiciliary care.

It provides room, board and personal services to non-related persons. It is a state licensed business.

Blue Haven is located on the outskirts of Dover and houses 15 people. Some are relatives of Granite City residents. The Roadys feel that they have outgrown the building they are presently in and want to build a larger home on a five-acre lot which they own in the city of Dover.

The zoning committee is not sure whether they want a home such as this in the city limits. The committee asks the community what its feelings on this are.

There are many people in our own community who are in some way or another involved with Dover. I am asking that they write to the Roadys and give them their feelings on this.

Our senior citizens need a place like the Roadys who do this. I am asking that you write to them with your comments at: Blue Haven Care Home, Route 1, Box 106, Dover, Tenn. 37005.

MRS. LEE WINN

Feels taxes hurt business

Congratulations to the Granite City government. Pass all of those new tax hikes, and while you are at it, why not put a pay toilet in every home?

At the inflated rate of tax increases, you, the government of Granite City, will succeed in making our fine town a ghost town.

By no means let new business into town, surely you wouldn't want to see anyone get a job and get off of welfare or unemployment. Who cares who eats food? The 4 percent tax hike plus one percent luxury tax, (should all proposals pass and be found legal), is supposed to cover the "oversights" in money management, but don't forget, Governor Thompson also wants to pass a luxury tax.

Keep up the good work Granite City government and you should be able to close down most existing businesses.

Again, congratulations, you made a believer out of me. Chicken Little was right. The 4 percent tax hike plus one percent luxury

News notes

With some Edwardsville aldermen talking of relinquishing the city's cartoon right to Brock Razing of the 112-year-old former Madison County Jail, the Goshen Preservation Alliance will try to persuade them otherwise as the Jan. 19 council meeting approaches. The County Board has applied the preservation ruling by an associate judge, and county officials have talked about relocating the government center from downtown Edwardsville to the fringe area if the city persists in intervening in what they regard as a county matter.

The state's general revenue fund balance rose $48 million in December to total $165 million on Jan. 1.

Gov. James R. Thompson will not call a special legislative session to seek adoption of a new liquor tax unless and until he is sure the state will be able to pay the bill. It is opposed by House Speaker George Ryan, whom Thompson has endorsed for the office of lieutenant governor. The governor will deliver his 1982 "state of the state" address Jan. 13.

The Fourth District Appellate Court on Tuesday upheld a 1979 Illinois Commerce Commission decision allowing Illinois Power Co. to charge rates based on part of the costs of building a nuclear-powered electric generating plant at Clinton.

Lawsuits in Cook and Winnebago counties seek to overturn a new $5 surcharge on divorce filings in Illinois.

The $5 was added Jan. 1 to the $45 filing fee. A class action suit says the charge is unfair to women, who file more of the divorce petitions than do men. It adds that the "overwhelming number of persons subject to domestic violence are women who are unable to defend themselves."

Unusually quiet during his freshman year as a U.S. senator, Alan Dixon of Illinois will speak out more in the future, he said at a press conference in Springfield on Tuesday. He voiced support for U.S. sanctions against Russia for its invasion of Poland, and predicted 1982 will be a good year for Democrats, including Sen. Stevenson II, the candidate for governor.

A lawsuit by Circuit Clerk William Portell for more office space may be settled out of court.

U.S. firms made 6,200,000 autos in 1981 down from 1980's 6,300,000 and the lowest since the industry produced 5,500,000 cars in 1981.

With the start of the next fiscal year on July 1, Illinois drivers will have the opportunity to have an organ donor card printed on the back of each new and renewed driving license. This state ranks near the bottom nationally in the ratio of organ transplants performed to population. More than 600 Illinois adults and children are waiting for kidney transplants while 300 others await corneal transplants.

Steel imports in the first 11 months of 1981 rose 31 percent, from nearly 14 million tons to 18.3 million, latest figures show.

TAKE CROSSING GATE FROM RR TRACK Two crossing gate arms from the 22nd Street railroad tracks and one arm from the 23rd Street crossing were stolen, but later were recovered, it was reported at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday by an employee of the Norfolk and Western Railroad.

Bolts were snapped and plugs were taken out in order to remove the arms, the R.R. spokesman said.

An anonymous caller told railroad officials the three crossing gate arms lying in an alley in the 2200 block, between Benton and Adams streets, police said.

TOOLS IN CAR TAKEN

A $227 sewer machine and machine tools and car-penter tools valued at $236 were stolen from the locked auto of Philip Shands, 2108 Adams St., while it was parked in the driveway there Monday night.

Feels treatment plant staff is ignored and underrated

To the Editor:

(Comments intended for the Granite City Council members and the chairman of the Sewerage Treatment Plant Committee, Warren Decatur)

I have been present at several council meetings at which there has been action taken to pass tax laws which are intended to bring in revenue for the city. There would not have to be a cutback in city services.

I understand that the police force and the fire department are to be kept to full force, but there is much discussion on cutting back on the employees at the treatment plant. Since the treatment plant is (supposed to be) self-sustaining, I can't understand why there should be any cutback in the work force there. I have been at the treatment plant and have seen first-hand that to decrease the number of employees there would very much jeopardize the operation of the plant.

I understand you have recommended awards for the employees of the police department, but why not do the same for the employees at the treatment plant. I believe that the employees at the treatment plant are doing a good job, too, and deserve some recognition, which neither you nor the superintendent of the plant have given them.

It's about time someone is 'speaking out' for them. Instead, there seems to be nothing said about them, except they're not doing their jobs right and that there should be a cutback in the treatment plant employees. The treatment plant is as much needed as the police department for the city. I believe you should start, as chairman of the treatment plant committee, to speak up for the men there.

The treatment plant is self-sustaining, since sewage fees are collected from the residents of this area. Therefore, it should not be necessary to lay off any employees there. In fact, more men are needed there to keep the plant operating as it should. A decrease in the number of employees there would be in bad taste. I don't know if you are aware of the situation at the treatment plant. I believe you should take a good, hard look at the conditions there and then take positive action to improve the situation.

A CONCERNED CITIZEN AND TAXPAYER

Contractors confident about nation's future

To the Editor:

From construction's perspective, the first year of the Reagan presidency has a surface appearance of parsimony that would make Scrooge seem like a philanthropist.

For example, Page 52 of the Reagan administration's own report card states, "Consistent with overall administration policy, total federal highway spending was reduced to $8 billion per year from the $10 billion planned for the previous administration."

The Environmental Protection Agency's construction grants program has been reduced to $2.4 billion for fiscal year '82, from a projected $3.7 billion.

Long the Reagan administration has reduced federal expenditure for EPA's construction program by $80 million. It was the states more involved in meeting state's needs.

As early as March 1981, the Associated General Contractors of America, composed of more than 30,000 industry firms, anticipated that President Reagan's proposals would reduce federal funding of construction by at least $18.2 billion.

The construction industry, although traveled in road building, was due for even tougher times.

The scenario was ripe for a federal attack on Ronald Wilson Reagan.

The vocal and powerful construction industry that employs more than 4,000,000 on-site workers — and more than 20,000,000 when indirect employment is considered — would show the 40th president that he could not be so cavalier.

The attack never occurred. Instead, on March 16, 1981, the Associated General Contractors of America named President Reagan as its man of the year in support of his program of spending, tax and regulatory cuts.

Later, more than 40 associations formed the Construction Industry Coalition for the New Beginning and worked to ensure congressional approval of the president's program for economic recovery.

Today, as the Reagan administration approaches its first anniversary, as its critics plant seeds of doubt, is the hard-pressed construction industry emerging from its shell to attack, discredit or embarrass the administration?

Not by a long shot. Why? Even the construction industry is so pre-occupied toward the Reagan administration is almost elusive in its simplicity.

It is not limited to support of spending, tax and regulatory cuts. The fourth reason for its stance is the realization that the return to reason it had so long advocated for government had actually arrived.

The construction industry did not want constant confrontation with the best form of government on earth, even as we build the regulatory juggernaut of hiring and subcontracting, quotas, paperwork lizards that follow industry rules, regulations, and the erosion of confidence in government and business alike that followed attack and counterattack.

A return to reason was in order. What has the Reagan administration done to achieve a return to reason? The construction industry believes that the greatest achievements so far have been restoration of confidence in government from a business community that does not want to be feared or abused; a truce in the industrial facilities followed by real progress in clearing the regulatory jungle;

Leadership qualities of firmness, honesty and evenhanded responsiveness that promote action and reject reaction; and tax incentives which will promote growth and progress.

Looking to 1982 and the second year of the Reagan administration, the construction industry is cautiously optimistic — although not overwhelmed by the prospect of immediate prosperity.

For the long-range future, the construction industry is highly optimistic. The potential exists and is readily achievable for the construction industry to boom from $230 billion annually to $400 billion plus.

As exorbitant interest rates decline, as inflation recedes — and as mutual confidence in business and public confidence is restored and solidified by further regulatory reductions — the construction industry, the 20,000,000 Americans it employs directly and indirectly will again become the most vibrant force in our economy.

Henkhaus will fight 'machine'

Madison County Treasurer Mick Henkhaus said Wednesday his real opponent in the race for re-election is the county's Democratic "machine."

"This is it for them. They have to beat me, or why would anyone ever go to them for support in the future," he remarked at a press conference at the Courthouse.

Although Henkhaus is the incumbent, the Democratic Party-led committee-endorsed Fred Patrick of Granite City in the March primary. Also running is Robert Stille of Edwardsville.

Henkhaus said, "My record as treasurer and my longtime affiliation with the Democratic Party led me to seek the endorsement of my party a few weeks ago. After much consideration and soul searching, I decided to go to screwing."

"It appeared that the race for treasurer would be the only contest in the primary which could result in divisiveness for our party. I didn't want a situation where the screening committee claimed I did not endorse me because I didn't show up."

"Now, the treasurer's race is the only seriously contested one in the Democratic primary and the party has endorsed one of their loyal boys."

"I'm fine; it's what I expected, although I had hoped in the back of my mind that the party leadership also was interested in unity in producing good candidates, and in being responsive to the people. That notion was proved wrong."

"The result is the first non-endorsed incumbent in 16 years. The previous one, County School Supt. Wilbur Trimpe, beat the machine in the primary in 1968."

"I'm in the race to stay and to win," Henkhaus concluded. "My only regret so far is that the leadership does not agree with my assessment that the party needs to be strong, united and forward-looking. The party leaders have once again put personal feelings first."

Volcano damage dwarfed Every year, insects and diseases kill seven times as much timber as the 34.5 million cubic feet destroyed in a flash by the eruption of Mount St. Helens in 1980. Fires, natural and man-caused, ruin three times the timber volume laid waste at the base of the volcano in the Cascade Mountains.

Progress during 1981 at medical center

Letter to the Editor:

A community is much more than a collection of businesses, houses, and people traveling to and from between them. A community is a social being, its personality and character brought to life by the people who bring it to life.

Its strength lies, not in the actions of a few individuals, but in the quality of the interactions of many people. When these interactions lead to greater trust between people, there is a greater willingness to support and share with others, and the resources available to everyone are increased.

One of the greatest tests of community strength is economic difficulty. The machinery of need breeds tension that chafes at empty rhetoric and promises. At a time when the elements of a community need most to be unified and work together, mistrust and fear may pull them apart.

The past year has been challenging for the people of our community, but it has been a year of growth. It has, in fact, brought us closer together. Because of community support, St. Elizabeth's Hospital has grown from a small hospital to a medical center.

We have, in turn, sought to increase our community services. In 1981, we have added Talbot Hall, our chemical dependency unit, Industrial Medicine program, Lifetime, and the Pacemaker Clinic. Our Home Health Department has grown to have the Hospice program.

Our Mobile Meals program has proven to be a success in serving the residents. When people of the area learned recently that this service is too costly to maintain, we were overwhelmed by the volume of donations we received to assist the program.

This strong sense of community strength is further evident in other donations we have received. The EMT's contributed $1,500 worth of toys and Christmas concert performed by the SIUE Concert Chorus as a gift to the community.

Members of our medical staff donated their interest in a tract of land located on Maryville Road, valued at $1.2 million. One of these physicians, reflecting this sense of community support, said, "When I was starting out, St. Elizabeth's and I became one. Now it's my turn to give."

Limited opposition for Cong. Price

Congressman Melvin Price, 77, Belleville, will have ballot opposition in the March primary and November 1982 general election. But no widely-known individuals with major backing filed petitions prior to the end of the filing period on Monday.

The filing took place later than usual due to litigation over the boundaries of new Congressional districts in the state.

Price, a member of Congress since 1944, is seeking a 20th consecutive two-year term and traditionally has gained reelection by wide margins. He is chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

The local congressman, a Democrat, is said to be troubled with an arthritic condition but believes that his health generally is excellent. Some elected officials at various times have discussed running against him, but he has outlasted them all and is regarded as a virtual certainty to gain another House term.

He spends the bulk of his time in Washington due to the nearly year-round nature of Congressional sessions, and votes on a high percentage of the House roll calls, while returning periodically to his district to confer with constituents and in organizations.

The 23rd District is being changed to the 21st simultaneously with a reduction in the Illinois Congressional delegation from 24 to 22 members. The new district includes all of Madison County and most of St. Clair County.

One of the oldest of all congressmen in length of service, the former chairman of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee will be opposed in the Democratic primary by Floyd Fessler Jr., 29, Alton, an operating engineer at the Shell Oil Co. refinery in Wood River, and Mrs. Sandra Climaco, 29, Belleville, an anti-abortion activist who is the wife of a physician.

Fessler said in announcing his candidacy that "I have great respect for him. I do not wish to just replace him but, in essence, to continue to carry on his way of thinking." He describes himself as "the average man."

Mrs. Climaco favors intensified efforts by the Federal government to discourage the large-scale practice of aborting human fetuses before they are born.

Running for the same Congressional seat on the Republican ticket will be Robert H. Gaffner, 49, of Greenville, director of community relations for the St. Louis Community College.

Cong. Paul Simon, Carbonate Democrat, Cong. Paul Findley, Pittsfield Republican, and Cong. Daniel B. Crane, Danville Republican, also are seeking reelection. They have no primary opponents but will have opposition in November.

Cong. Robert H. Michel of Peoria, U. S. House Republican leader, and Cong. Philip M. Crane, Mount Prospect Republican, face no Democratic challenge in the general election.

For state central committee posts of the two parties in the 21st District, the Republican contenders are Robert Glenn and James D. Radden, both of Belleville, and the Democratic rivals are incumbent Bruce Cook of Belleville and Betty Jean Mays of East St. Louis.

William Stiehl, of Belleville, did not seek reelection as Republican state committeeman.

Democratic candidates for Madison County Board have been invited to attend a public meeting of the Granite City Democrat Club Wednesday night, Jan. 13, at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 2052 Edison Ave.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. Candidates then will be given individual time to discuss their candidacies and qualifications. If time permits, there will be a question and answer session.

HONORED FOR HELPING.

Louise Williams, right, of Realty World Star in Granite City, receives an award from Don Ursin at the 1981 Illinois Association of Realtors annual convention in Rosemont, Ill. The award was for first place in the state for the Make America Better Project. Projects aiding the handicapped were judged and the two-day Edwardsville-Collinsville realtors project to collect donations for Easter Seals was honored as the best. The honoree is president of the Edwardsville-Collinsville Board of Realtors and will serve as Make America Better chairman for that board this year. She also is a member of the Madison County Women's Council of Realtors and the Granite City Board of Realtors.

Tips on travel during ice, snow

"A Winter Accident can be only one mistake away." Winter weather doesn't cause accidents, but it can turn a small mistake into a serious or fatal accident, according to the Illinois State Police.

"Winter driving often means that you start out with two strikes against you: Loss of Traction and Reduced Visibility. Install snow tires on your vehicle before bad weather sets in. Tire chains are the most effective when on ice. (Metal studded tires are not permitted in Illinois.) Remember that it will take a much greater distance to safely stop your vehicle, therefore allow a greater safe following distance. Don't under inflate your tires, this only causes excess tire wear and increases fuel consumption." Trooper James Gallo, public information officer for District 11, suggests,

"Seeing and being seen is a very important factor to safe winter driving. Make sure that all of your windows are clear of ice, snow or frost. You can't avoid a hazard if you can't see it. If you encounter bad weather during the day, turn your headlights on low beam. This may not help you see any better but it will make you more visible to the other drivers," he explained.

"Prepare yourself and your vehicle for winter driving, remember, the only place for alcohol is in the radiator of your vehicle. Reducing your speed to match the existing conditions can help you avoid the third strike — the accident."

He also suggested that prior to traveling, motorists call the Illinois State Police weather phone at 345-1330 for weather and road conditions and plan according to the weather.

Burial sites of Revolutionary soldiers listed

By PAULINE MEYER
(Second of two articles)

Although the taverns around the courthouse square in the 1820s were the site of many joyful public occasions, the town fathers could not persuade General Lafayette to stop in Edwardsville, where many Revolutionary soldiers wanted to entertain him as he passed this way on his tour of the United States in 1824.

However, Gen. Lafayette did stop in St. Louis where he was greeted by Gaius Paddock, a Revolutionary soldier who was resident of Madison County. Paddock's wife and eight daughters accompanied him to St. Louis.

The Paddock family shared in the festivities that attended the visit of Lafayette, including a ball held in his honor.

For many years after that event, a gold medalion of the Marquis de Lafayette, a souvenir of his visit to St. Louis, was kept on the white marble mantle in the living room of the Paddock home, and on the wall hung a pair of silk dancing slippers worn by one of the Paddock's daughters who danced at the ball.

Today, the house, the medalion, and the dancing slippers are all gone, but the Paddock cemetery near Alton, only a stone's throw away from where the house once stood, is still there and in remarkably good condition, which is more than can be said for many other graves of Revolutionary soldiers buried in Madison County.

A marker placed on the grave of Gaius Paddock in October of 1927 by the Ninian Edwards Chapter of the Alton DAR is still the focal point of the small, private cemetery located on the 160 acres granted to Paddock by the government in recognition for his service in the Revolutionary War.

Paddock arrived here in 1817 from Vermont to claim his acreage which became known as "Paddock Wood." The cemetery maintained by relatives is all that remains of Paddock's estate.

Paddock was one of those Revolutionary soldiers who received a pension. Not all soldiers who applied for pensions received them. Such was the plight of 91-year-old William Mead, whose application for a pension was rejected on the grounds that he was a deserter. In 1830, three county board members, including Thomas Gilliam, the Revolutionary war soldier and brother of James Gilliam, met at the new "donation" courthouse to review Mead's pension application and hear his appeal. The brick donation courthouse where they met was little improvement over the log one that Tins and his family had wintered earlier. The unfinished condition of the new "donation" courthouse caused Lorenzo Dow, a famous Methodist circuit-riding preacher, to refuse its use as a hall in which he was to deliver one of his hell-fire-and-brimstone sermons before an audience of Madison County residents.

He said it was only fit for a pig-sty. It was in this pig-sty, however, that William Mead told the county commissioners his side of the story.

He said he was not a deserter, but instead, was a victim of circumstances. He said he was unable to return to his company before it was discharged due to a series of events that included his capture by the British, his subsequent imprisonment on a prison-ship, from which he escaped. After that, he unofficially joined another company fighting at Eutaw Springs, where he was wounded, further delaying his return to his original company before it was disbanded.

In spite of his pleas, court records show that his pension was denied. Frances Roach was more fortunate when he applied for a pension. He was 92 when he appeared before the same commissioners and told his story.

He said he had enlisted in 1778 and again in 1780 when he served with Captain Dougherty on the frontier. He went with his captain in the service of his country under the command of General Rogers Clark in 1782, and in 1786 he fought the Indians under the command of General Benjamin Logan.

His pension was granted and he received $24.76 a year until his death at the age of 106. It was reported that even in 1826 he was delighted in going out with the boys and "lay patterns" (as he called it) for them to jump to. He would jump and strike his heels twice together before coming down and then laugh heartily to see the youth of the neighborhood try it again and again without success.

In 1819 William McAdams, another Revolutionary soldier buried in Madison County, settled on a land grant and became a successful farmer. Like many Revolutionary soldiers, he lived to the ripe old age of 83. At his funeral, he was given full military honors. Every old musket in the neighborhood was brought into requisition for the occasion.

Sixty-nine years later, in 1912, Miss Nina Watkins, a lineal descendant of William McAdams, read "Grandmother's Story of Bunker Hill" as part of ceremonies commemorating Madison County's Centennial Celebration and the unveiling of a bronze tablet in the Madison County Courthouse honoring the Revolutionary soldiers who lie buried in Madison County.

Mrs. L. M. Castle, regent of the Ninian Edwards Chapter of the DAR in Alton, presented the plaque to the county in eloquent words portraying the life of the soldiers of the Revolution, not forgetting the part taken by the women of that period.

Hike into Bear Tooth Mountains reviewed

Monday's program of the Piasa Palisades Sierra Club is entitled "Portrait of a Pristine Wilderness: The Bear Tooth of Southern Montana."

Dr. Reinhart Ross and his wife, Dorothy, have tramped the trailless wilderness of America for many years, so they were well prepared to make the most of this year's trip with six students into the Bear Tooth Mountains. There they subsisted for eight weeks on backpack supplies and what nature provided.

"Photographic records of this experience will provide one of the best views of unadulterated wilderness the Sierra Club has ever brought to Alton, a spokesman said. Dr. Ross will discuss some "en-counters of the most unusual kind" with wild animals getting a rare glimpse of mankind.

"Dr. Ross, the founder of the Department of Music at Principia College, brings special insight into and appreciation of nature because of his years of wilderness experience. It has been the setting for much of his most inspired thought. This program will plumb the depths of this inspiration and his thoughts will be punctuated with photographs never before taken by man," according to the spokesman.

As usual, the public is being invited to all Sierra Club meetings. The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the First Presbyterian Church at Fourth and Alby streets in Alton. Refreshments will be served. Applications for membership will be available.

Ballard-Guebhart

Concordia Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding on Dec. 19 of Miss Connie S. Guebhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon E. Guebhart, 4728 Vincent Ave., Houston, Texas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elton Ballard of Birmingham, Ala.

The Rev. Arvin Twietmeyer conducted the double ring ceremony at 4 p.m., before an altar decorated with bouquets of red and white flowers and accented with burning tapers in brass holders.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Organist Denise Rankin and Janis Guebhart, soloist. Escorted to the altar by her father, the former Miss Guebhart wore a full length white organza gown designed with an oval neckline and long lace sleeves.

The semi full skirt and chapel train was accented with a pleated flounce enhanced with lace motifs. Her fingertip veil was secured to a lace headpiece and she carried a cascade of white gardenias and red roses.

Lou Ann Wright served as honor attendant with bridesmaids, Phillis Jaskowiak and Debora Hawk, both cousins of the bride.

They selected formal red velvet gowns fashioned with white lace necklines and complemented with white fur hats and muffs, which were accented with a cluster of white gardenias, red rosebuds and baby's breath.

Billy Jo McKee and Tim Guebhart, a cousin of the bride, served as flower girl and ringbearer, she was dressed in a red velvet frock featuring a white lace trim and she carried a white wicker basket filled with red rosebuds.

Richard Elms attended the groom as best man. Willard McKee and John Guebhart, a brother of the bride, were groomsmen.

Tim Jaskowiak and Curtis Westerman, cousins of the bride, seated the guests.

Guests were received by the newlywed couple at a reception held at the VFW Hall in Granite City. The rehearsal dinner was served at Pantera's Pizza, 1535 Johnson Road.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Guebhart was attired in a beige lace gown with an accented pleated skirt. She wore a gardenia and rosebud corsage.

The bride graduated from North High School in 1977, and has been living and working in Texas. Her husband also has been employed in Texas for two years. They are now residing in Houston.

'82 CAMPAIGN

Thompson sees jobs as big issue

BY KEN WATSON

SPRINGFIELD — What will be the big issue in the 1982 Illinois governors' campaign?

Jobs. That's the opinion of Republican Gov. James Thompson, 45, who faces a fierce challenge from Democrat Adlai Stevenson, 51. Stevenson has already touched frequently on the jobs issue in early campaign comments.

"Jobs, I sense, is going to be the campaign issue," the overriding campaign issue," Thompson said in a recent interview. "That's fine with me because we've got a record which I think is unparalleled in the history of this state and I'll defend my job record and economic development record."

Thompson, however, obviously has a problem with the economics issue. Illinois like other major northern industrial states has been especially hard hit by the current recession. It ranks fourth among the states in unemployment, having a rate higher than only Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

All four states are dominated by heavy industry, including automobiles and steel heavily wracked by unemployment, and Illinois has the added burden of a massive decline in production of farm machinery.

Neither Thompson nor any other governor is capable of repealing the laws of economics and producing prosperity and jobs where the ingredients do not exist. All he can do is convince Illinois voters that he is doing all any governor can do to improve the state's economy.

He feels that his administration's efforts in this area are not generally appreciated, especially in the keen competition among the states to land high technology industries, considered the wave of future prosperity.

"We are in it already," Thompson says. "That's a sleeper. Some politicians who would like my job, I tend that we're doing nothing in economic development. But the numbers will prove that false. We've had more than a quarter of a million new jobs since I've been governor."

"But even in areas like new, high technology we are already a high tech state. We weren't as noisy about it or as visible in developing it as some states like California, North Carolina and Massachusetts. But we are now starting to talk about our achievements and what we're doing. A major weakness of my administration is that we haven't gone out and blown our own horn enough."

Responsible for promoting new business is the state Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, which has had growing pains but has been considered on the upbeat during the past year.

"DCCA is maturing as an agency," Thompson says. "It has brought new people into its staff and has started promoting the state."

Thompson lacks of a number of new high-tech industries which have moved into Illinois in recent months, including those in the pharmaceutical, communications and other technical fields.

"What I'm trying to do is diversify the Illinois economy. I don't want to be an auto or agri-business or agriculture. I want to fill in the cracks with high tech, even more than we have now — and with service industries and light manufacturing. I'm persuaded that the more we diversify the Illinois economy the more recession-proof we can be.

"Once you understand that small, medium-sized industries create 90 percent of the new jobs in this nation, if you work hard enough all you have to do is get 10 plants in here and you've got an oil company."

Thompson is convinced that two basic things must be done to meet the challenge from the Sun Belt and bring more business and jobs to Illinois. One is to rehabilitate the deteriorating highway system and to strengthen contacts with Congress, the administration and federal agencies in Washington.

"When we fall badly behind in keeping our highways and bridges up to snuff, then we're going to hurt in economic development. Because the No. 1 thing people want to know when they talk about auto bringing business into this state is, 'How do I get goods in and how do I get goods out?'"

With federal aid to the state declining, Thompson insists it is more important than ever for Illinois to strengthen its ties in Washington.

During the Thompson years, Illinois has fared well in federal allocation of highway funds. But the string is running out, and Thompson feels one reason that Illinois has failed to join 25 other states in increasing its gasoline tax, is its getting increasingly difficult to go to Washington and say to the administration, the White House or to the Congress, "Give us money, because we're doing nothing in Illinois to help ourselves."

As Thompson prepares to go back to the voters a third time in what is undoubtedly his toughest campaign, he is asked the inevitable question: Does he expect to serve the full four years if elected?

"I've been asked that question and I say: Look, I can't promise because I never want to be in a position where I would want to serve if I'm not getting a challenge out of a job. But I'm not going to run off."

Life-expectancy higher in China

The World Bank reports that "the physical quality of life of the bulk of the Chinese people (in the People's Republic) is strikingly better than in most other low-income countries. From 1950 to 1979, life expectancy increased from 36 years to 64. "Starting at about the same level in 1950, the average low-income country improved life expectancy to 51 by 1979, while the average middle-income country started higher (48) but ended lower (61)."

SIU budget called 'tight'

The Southern Illinois University system's share of next year's $1.3 billion public higher education budget will be enough to get by on, says the university's top administrator, but there's not going to be anything to spare.

Discussing the fiscal year 1983 higher education budget proposed by the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) staff, SIU Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw told the board that the budget is "well thought out," but he said the cost of parts of the budget plan to individual universities needs to be recognized.

"We find these recommendations to be manageable, but barely so, and only if we appreciate pull in our horns," Shaw told IBHE members during the board's January meeting Tuesday at Triton College in River Grove. "Each of us, however, needs to keep in mind that beyond a certain point budget cutbacks become destructive rather than constructive."

"We need to recognize that the so-called 'self-help' measures and tuition increases in excess of 10 percent are what make possible a significant portion of this plan," Shaw said.

Tuition may rise by about 10 percent

The SIU system's share of the proposed fiscal year 1983 budget is a 6.8 percent increase over this year and amounts to $167.2 million to operate SIU Carbondale and SIU Edwardsville. It also includes about $5.5 million for capital construction projects at the SIU campuses.

The recommendation is about $12 million less than what the university had asked for, but adds $10.7 million to this year's budget total.

Shaw noted that the development in the state and nation.

"Initiatives taken in periods of austerity, however, require that there be corresponding adjustments," he said.

"These initiatives are coming out of our hides," Shaw noted that the budget's "self-help" provisions will require SIU to take money from other programs to fill out budgeted items such as the salary increases, and will require tuition increases of about 15 percent.

"We all should be aware that this comes at a very difficult time in view of expected federal cutbacks and the overall recession," he said. "We will need to continue to be sensitive to that fine balance between student ability to pay and the charges we ascribe."

The IBHE staff's recommended 1983 budget, which would take effect July 1, calls for $134.3 million in additional spending for Illinois public higher education, 11.3 percent more than the current budget. About $22.5 million of that increase would come from additional revenue raised by universities, mostly through tuition increases. Another $9.2 million would come from additional state appropriations.

Shaw also thanked the IBHE for giving Illinois public universities the opportunity to take part in putting together the budget recommendations.

Weather-vane-gauge traps pollen grains

The first worldwide comparative study of allergen-causing plant pollen is being carried out in Montpellier, France, using data from some in the United States.

The "weather-vane" consists of vertical filters in the wind around a movable arm tapping airborne particles and separating from them thousands and perhaps millions of undamaged pollen grains, 5 to 10 times as many as are collected by other techniques.

Upper Volta Lower in voltage

Landed Upper Volta in the center of West Africa is one of the world's poorest countries. Its gross national product per person was $180 in 1979.

It lacks most of the human and physical resources needed to promote development. Its literacy rate in 1972 was only 5 percent, compared with an average of 38 percent for all low-income countries in 1976.

Low blood sugar isn't diabetes

Q. Is diabetes the same as having low blood sugar? What are the chances that my children will also have low blood sugar, since my husband and I both have this problem? — B.C., Columbus, Ohio

A. No, diabetes (full name "diabetes mellitus") causes high blood sugar, not low blood sugar.

Diabetes can be due to a failure of the body to make enough insulin or an inability of the body tissues to respond properly to insulin. Insulin allows the tissues to use blood sugar more slowly (and also makes more blood sugar) causing the concentration in the blood to be high, not low.

If a patient with diabetes is treated with insulin and the doses are too high, he may then have a low blood sugar episode, but that is due to the treatment, not the disease.

Very rarely, patients with very early diabetes may have high blood sugar periods alternating with periods of low blood sugar, but this is, as I say, uncommon.

Low blood sugar is not a very common cause of difficulties. It can be due to many different causes, but few, if any, of these are inherited in the way that diabetes is inherited. Your children probably will have no problems at all. — Dr. Daniel Steinberg, professor of medicine, at the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine.

Q. I am concerned about X-ray exposure and cancer. Specifically, my dentist requires a six-month checkup with X-rays. How harmful is this, and is it really necessary every six months? — H.W., Apple Creek, Ohio

A. X-ray exposure has been directly linked with production of cancer or the production of specific cancerous lesions.

It is certainly obvious that the less exposure to ionizing radiation, the less chance there is for the production of such cancers. However, as there is a risk connected with almost any phase of our normal lives (such as driving a car), one has to weigh the risk vs. the benefit of the medical and dental use of X-rays.

The risk associated with dental X-rays cannot be assessed without specific knowledge of the machine and techniques used. It would be legitimate to question the dentist as to the dose delivered by this particular machine and to ask for evidence that his machine is under a quality assurance program carried out by a certified radiological physicist.

The question of frequency in the use of X-ray examinations is of course a matter of the practitioner's judgment. A recent study involving a large number of patients at Yale University revealed that the detection of cavities was not any greater using X-rays than it was by simple clinical examination. — Dr. Norman Bally, professor of radiology, at the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine.

Home loan rates to drop in '82

BY JAMES M. WOODARD

Sales of existing (used) homes will increase by 20 percent in 1982 compared with sales during the past year. The sales dollar volume will rise 20 percent.

observant buyers will reveal that "attractive" houses bargains exist at much below quoted rates, if they act promptly."

Another highly respected economist with an in-depth knowledge of the real estate market also pointed to special opportunities for home buyers in early 1982.

Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, said:

"There is a bright side to the current market. This is an excellent time to buy a home, particularly if it is financed through an assumption of an existing mortgage or with the seller accepting a first or second mortgage."

"The use of creative financing, which occurs in more than 60 percent of all existing home sales, is reducing the effective mortgage rate to buyers by 3 to 5 percentage points from rates quoted by financial institutions."

"It can reduce the monthly principal and interest payments on a median-priced home by about $200, or 8 percent of the average family's budget. That goes a long way toward overcoming the problem of home affordability."

Another significant factor that will affect the market in coming months and years relates to demographics. Home buyers will increasingly be first-time buyers, economist Kidd noted.

"People in the first-time home buying group (age 28-

44) are now the largest segment of the population, and mortgage rates will be at their peak for several years. About three-fifths of the net new households formed in the next five years will be in this age group."

Q. Was General Motors' "buy a house and get a free car" campaign successful? A. Yes and no. This gimmick to sell homes of transferred personnel created much publicity and contacts by prospective buyers (some of whom turned into buyers). However, all buyers so far elected to take the car's cash value as a credit against the purchase rather than take the offered car.

In the meantime, the shiny new cars ranging from Chevrolets to Cadillacs, are taken off the driveways after successful playing their role as promotional attention-getters.

A diet—an annual resolution

By MARY RICHARDS

The holidays are over, and you may be one of many thinking about starting or restarting a diet. Those New Year's resolutions only seem to last about seven days.

Those of you who indulged yourselves with pumpkin pie and Christmas cookies should now start cutting down on the amount of sweets and fats you eat.

When you begin your diet program, the Illinois Department of Public Health cautions you not to cut back too drastically on your food intake. We know by now that the fad "take-weight-off-quick" diets can be harmful and are usually futile because you soon put the weight back on. Your real goal should be to make permanent changes in your eating habits, and to do this requires a determined commitment and patience.

Often, we try to diet for the wrong reasons. Don't look at a diet program as a temporary measure—a crash program that will help you look better in a new swim suit. Usually, these crash programs fail.

The problem is that you have not permanently changed your eating habits. So once the crash program is over, the pounds return; the bulges are back. If you go back to in-between meals snacking or over-use of fats and sweets, you will regain the weight you worked so hard to lose.

It is not easy to commit yourself to a weight-loss program, and to maintain your ideal weight, but the fad "take-weight-off-quick" diets can be harmful and are usually futile because you soon put the weight back on. Your real goal should be to make permanent changes in your eating habits, and to do this requires a determined commitment and patience.

Free classes in aerobics

Free Christian Aerobics classes are being offered by the Dance Aerobics Studio, 2048 West Main, Collinsville, which is the third floor of BAC Miners.

Christian Aerobics, like weekend Dance Aerobics classes, sets exercise and dance movements to music. The music used in the current routines is all from the "Heed the Call" album by the Christian gospel rock group, "The Imperials." The dance movements may be from tap, ballet, folkdance, jazz, disco or ballroom.

The exercises are designed to stretch and tone muscles while providing a cardiovascular workout equal to playing racquetball, with a warm-up, peak workout, and a cooldown. The level of the workout may be individualized, according to the age, by walking, jogging or running through the steps.

Colleen Riley and Diana Morgan will lead the classes beginning Saturday, Jan. 9 from 1 to 2 p.m. A half-hour Bible study will follow. The current topic is "Women of the Bible."

The classes are open to women and teenage girls, but younger girls should be accompanied by their mothers. Participants are advised to wear stretchy, comfortable clothes and tennis shoes.

State acts to continue ban on public sales of machine guns

Governor James R. Thompson has outlined a series of actions he has initiated to make certain there are no over-the-counter sales of machine guns under a new state law which took effect Jan. 1 permitting their possession by those who manufacture or design them for law enforcement or military use.

The governor said the law, Public Act 82-562, has been interpreted by some to permit any citizen to buy a machine gun or other previously-banned weapons.

"The steps I have taken will make sure that no one can walk into a gun shop in Illinois and buy a machine gun," Thompson said.

"When I approved this legislation, I had no intention of legalizing the possession of machine guns, sawed-off shotguns or any previously-banned deadly weapons for anyone other than those who must possess them in their professional capacities as designers, or manufacturers—certainly not for sale to the general public," the governor said.

To clarify the situation and to halt any potential sales, Thompson said he has:

—Asked the attorney general to interpret the new law as to its scope.

—Directed his legal staff to draft proper language to narrow the law's application, in the event the attorney general holds that it permit citizens to buy machine guns and other previously-forbidden weapons

—Asked local police chiefs and county sheriffs not to approve any federal applications for transfer of ownership of any of the weapons.

Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms not to approve any sales of the weapons.

1,000 boats inspected

The Norwegian Coast Guard made 1,000 inspections of foreign fishing vessels last year and found 273 law violations. Fourteen cases resulted in arrests and prosecutions. Danish fishermen were the most numerous violators.

Winter traction aids evaluated

Noting the rapid growth in front-wheel-drive vehicles, Granite City Chief of Police Ronald J. Veizer has commented on a recurring question voiced by many drivers:

Do the commonly used traction aids — snow studs (where permitted) and chains — provide the same stopping assistance when used on the drive wheels of a front-wheel-drive (FWD) vehicle as they have been shown to provide when used on the rear wheels of a rear-wheel-drive vehicle?

To assist local drivers, the chief cited findings on glare ice reported by the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards. Highlights include:

1. Little stopping advantage was found when unstudded snow tires were placed on the drive wheels — either front or rear.

2. In the case of studded tires, these performed better on the rear-drive vehicle, reducing braking distance as much as 28 percent, as compared with 15 to 19 percent on the comparable FWD vehicle.

3. Steel link chains performed considerably better on the FWD drive vehicles — showing a 60 percent improvement vs. a 39 percent improvement when mounted on rear-drive wheels. This difference seems to be associated with a greater load transfer to the front wheels when the brakes are locked, allowing the more "aggressive" traction aids to bite into the slick surface.

The improvements cited were comparisons with original equipment highway tread on all four wheels and were locked-wheel stopping distance tests on glare ice from 20 miles an hour.

Chief Veizer also reviewed earlier skid-test recommendations based on rear-drive vehicles and endorsed by the International Association of Chiefs of Police:

REINFORCED TIRE CHAINS — tops for severe snow and ice conditions where available clearances allow their use (check your owner's manual to see whether your car requires the new smaller type PL chains). Chains provide four to seven times as much traction as regular highway tires on glare ice and deep snow.

STUDDED SNOW TIRES (where permitted) — new studs provide about three times the pull of regular tires on glare ice.

REGULAR SNOW TIRES — half again as much pulling power as regular tires in loose snow and 28 percent improvement on glare ice.

RADIAL TIRES on the traction performance of radial tires in snow varies widely and is dependent on the tread configuration; that is, a radial tire with a snow tread will provide better traction in snow than one with a regular tread.

When it comes to stopping, tests show that stopping on glare ice may take as much as nine times the normal, dry pavement distance.

Tests also show that conventional snow tires are of help in stopping on ice, while studded tires reduce braking distances by 19 percent, and reinforced tire chains by 50 percent.

Veizer concluded by adding his personal warnings to the skid testers' recommendations: "Regardless of efforts to improve traction on ice through the use of snow tires, studded tires, or tire chains, in no instance is the resulting traction close to that of conventional highway tires on either a dry or wet pavement. So, slow down and stay well back of traffic ahead on ice and snow-slick roads."

"Secondly, always buckle up. Use the safety restraints in your car — for yourself and your passengers.

"If you have children, equip your car with the proper type of restraints recommended for your child's age and weight."

$5.4 million in state capital improvements

Governor James R. Thompson has announced approval of more than $5.4 million in funds for capital improvement projects in Illinois.

The release of these funds again proves that Illinois is moving ahead in improving the services it provides for the people of this state. The funds approved are going toward a wide range of projects that will improve the quality of service government can provide," the governor said.

Funds approved included: —Release of $3.3 million in Capital Development Board (CDB) funds for work to renovate the dining and kitchen areas at Vandalia and Stateville Correctional Centers. At Vandalia, the work includes installation of a new kitchen ceiling, removal or replacement of plumbing, ventilation and electrical system and replacement of equipment. The work at the Stateville Center will include converting the current gym into a new kitchen and renovation of existing dining area.

—Release of $650,000 in Capital Development Board funds for the Illinois Community College Board. The funds will be used to replace 63,867 square feet of roofing at the Rock Valley Community College.

—Release of $1 million in CDB funds to the Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities for work to be done at the Galesburg Mental Health and Developmental Center.

Completion of certification work at four buildings that will house 80 residents is scheduled for the Center, and federal reimbursement for those beds will pay back the capital investment in one year.

—Release of $92,500 in general revenue funds for energy conservation projects at the Pontiac and East Moline Correctional Centers. The work at Pontiac will be to construct flow restrictions on showers and timing devices to control lighting in corridors. The East Moline work will include insulating steam and hot water lines in the Central Dietary Facility. Both projects will pay for themselves in energy savings within two years.

—Release of $200,000 in CDB funds to purchase the Hardin County Work Camp for the Department of Corrections. The funds will go toward the purchase of three structures on the 15-acre site. The work camp's capacity is 60 inmates.

—Release of $170,000 in CDB funds to install security lighting at the Pontiac Correctional Center. Work to be done includes installation of lighting along 3,000 feet of walkways.

New technology increasing usefulness of Illinois coal

Did you find coal in your stocking at Christmas? New technologies will allow Illinois coal to be used without polluting the environment, says Michael Witte, director of the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

The department is responsible for the Illinois Coal Development Program and grants for developing new technologies to use high-sulfur Illinois coal in environmentally acceptable ways. With the new technologies demonstrated by this program, Witte stated, Illinois coal can play an important part in the nation's energy future.

Industrial use of coal is receiving added emphasis in ENR's program this year. Successful demonstration of the needed technologies could add demand for 10 to 15 million tons of Illinois coal by 1995 in the industrial sector alone, Director Witte noted. This added demand would translate into 2,500 to 4,000 new jobs and nearly $750 million in additional annual income to the Illinois coal industry. The fuel cost savings to Illinois manufacturers could exceed $1 billion annually by 1995 at projected oil and natural gas prices.

Since the early 1970s, coal has been a principal hope for reducing our nation's dependence on foreign sources of oil. But increased use of Illinois coal has been slowed by the lack of economical ways to burn the coal without emissions of sulfur dioxide, a major environmental pollutant.

While nationally the demand for coal as a fuel source has increased, production and use of Illinois coal has remained fairly constant over the last decade. New technologies, such as coal gasification and fluidized-bed combustion, will make increased use of Illinois coal possible while protecting the environment.

The Illinois Coal Bond Fund is the source of financing the ENR's coal program. The bond fund has been used to support the demonstration of a fluidized-bed combustion boiler at Great Lakes Naval Station, now in successful operation, and to demonstrate coal gasification technology using the future Allis Chalmers' Klingas process at Illinois Power Company's Wood River station in East Alton. The Klingas project is now under construction.

The time has come for these technologies to be used in the industrial sector, Witte stated. To encourage use of these technologies in operating industrial facilities, ENR solicited proposals this fall for new technologies using Illinois coal in environmentally acceptable ways for commercial and industrial facilities. ENR is now considering proposals received through that solicitation from B. F. Goodrich in Henry and Midwest Solvents Company in Pekin.

B. F. Goodrich is proposing to build a Pyroflow circulating fluidized-bed combustion boiler designed to produce the steam required to operate its chemical plant.

The Pyroflow boiler selected by Goodrich is considered an advancement in fluidized-bed combustion, a second generation boiler with higher carbon and limestone utilization rates at relatively-low combustion temperatures.

Sulfur in Illinois coal, which is a major source of air pollution in any direct coal combustion process, is captured in the combustion bed itself, resulting in clean flue gases and dry residue of gypsum, which can be used as road bed material, an agricultural fertilizer supplement or disposed of in a landfill.

Midwest Solvents Company proposes to build two fluidized-bed combustion boilers designed by Foster-Wheeler at its Pekin facility to generate high pressure, high temperature steam and to generate electricity. This process is known as cogeneration and promises high efficiency in the use of fluidized-bed combustion boilers.

The waste heat from the boiler flue gases also will be used to dry the byproducts of alcohol production at the plant.

Each of these projects would use nearly 50,000 tons of high-sulfur Illinois coal each year and 14,000 tons of Illinois limestone. Thirty to 35 additional jobs in coal mining plus 10 to 15 additional jobs in related industries and operating the facility also would result from each project.

The economic benefit to the state from each project could be nearly $4 million per year, with additional benefits while the plants are built from equipment manufacturers and employment of construction workers.

ENR's Coal Development Program is an on-going effort by the state to encourage development of Illinois' vast coal resources. "Tremendous strides are possible in coal use technology," Witte added. "We continue to look for solid proposals, demonstrating technologies which can use Illinois coal in an environmentally sound manner."

SIUE officials look back on '1981

The year 1981 was a busy year for Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. Following are some of the "highlights" of the year, as viewed by the administration.

ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES

With the appointment in June of Dr. Barbara J. Teiers as vice-president and provost of Southern Illinois University, President Earl Lazerson announced completion of the administrative reorganization undertaken in the fall of 1980. The principal officers of the University, in addition to Dr. Teiers, are Dr. James H. Buck, director of the Office of Development and Public Affairs; Dr. Luther Statter, director of the Office of Supporting Services; Dr. Earl Beard, director of the Office of Personnel Services; Dr. John Reiner, director of the Office of Planning and Resource Management; and James F. Metcalf, budget director.

Other major appointments during the year included Elton M. Bigman, director of athletics and recreation; Eugene J. Magac, director of admissions and records; Robert M. Bruker, assistant to the president; Jack H. Drda, assistant to the director of supporting services; Arnold L. Meyer, assistant director of the Data Processing and Computer Center; Herbert C. Butts, dean of the School of Dental Medicine; John R. Rider, executive director of the Metro-East-St. Louis Regional Council on Intergovernmental Cooperation; and Gary N. Denue, director of the Lovejoy Library.

ACTIONS BY THE TRUSTEES

The SIUE Board of Trustees approved a cooperative educational program between SIUE and Blackburn College, allowing participating Blackburn students to enroll as students at SIUE in special education courses that Blackburn does not presently offer.

Residency status policies were changed by the board to permit part-time students who are residents of Missouri to pay tuition as if they lived in Illinois, and the board approved tuition and fee increases totaling approximately 10% percent.

Authorization to proceed with planning additional student housing was granted by the board, with an architectural and engineering firm employed to prepare a program statement for 84 units to house 672 students in an area near the University Center.

Contracts totaling $9,678 for construction of the multi-purpose physical education, recreation and athletics facility were awarded by the Capital Development Board and groundbreaking ceremonies were held at the construction site east of the Bubble Gym with another air support structure. The original facility was destroyed during a storm on July 20, but the adjacent shower and locker building was not damaged.

Other projects approved during the year included: $235,000 for repair of the University Center brick towers; $330,000 for replacement of the roofs on the Science and Communications Buildings; $180,000 for replacement windows at the East St. Louis Center and $96,488 for installation of an automatic elevator at the East St. Louis Center.

Non-instructional capital improvements approved by the board, to be funded from nonappropriated funds, included relocation of the Day Care Center at Tower Lake Housing, modification of the service drive to the Supporting Services Building, addition of lights along campus walks, construction of an outdoor swimming pool at Tower Lake, recreational area, additional high-mount light standards along parking lot walkways and roadways, a 96-inch diameter access drive to the Broadway Building in East St. Louis, construction of a connector at the north end of the University Drive oval to reduce the angle of junction with the two-lane roadway and other road improvements.

The seventh floor dance studio at the University's East St. Louis Center was named the Lenwood Morris Studio in recognition of Mr. Morris, who died Jan. 29 after serving more than 10 years as ballet master and instructor in the Performing Arts training Center. The names of six well-known dancers are commemorated in this region were approved for the new meeting rooms on the second floor of the University Center. They are: Hackberry, Red Bud, Dogwood, Oak and Hickory, and collectively, the new facilities are known as the Conference Center.

The board also approved naming a rare book room on the third floor of Lovejoy Library in honor of Mrs. Jennie Latzer Kaeser, 103-year-old resident of Highland, who provided funds for the project.

Five degree programs were abolished and the future directions of several other programs were changed in actions "resulting from the University's continuing effort to address the educational needs of the region," Dr. James R. Buck, director of development and public affairs, said the process includes establishing new majors and eliminating majors where there is no longer an interest.

DENTAL SCHOOL REVIEW

The Dental Education Committee of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, after reviewing dental education in the state since September, recommended in December that the SIUE School of Dental Medicine be continued, with reductions in operating and projected capital improvement costs. The committee also recommended "modest reductions" in the entering class size at each of the four Illinois dental schools.

In March, President Lazerson announced the opening of a second satellite dental clinic in East St. Louis at St. Mary's Hospital, staffed by general practice students from the School of Dental Medicine.

AWARDS

More than 150 students received special awards, in addition to nearly 1,000 recognized for academic achievement, at the annual Honors Day convocation in May. Among national awards received by students were first place by construction students in the American Concrete Institute's first cube competition, and first place by engineering students in the Model Bridge Building contest sponsored by the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Recipients of teaching awards at the university's 44th Commencement were: Patrick Riddleberger, professor of history; studies, recipient of the Alumni Association's Great Teacher Award; David F. Schwartz, associate professor of history, studies, recipient of the American Association of University Professors' Distinguished Service Award; and Dennis D. Staley, lecturer in the Academic Resource Center, Junior Achievement award. A graduate of the university, Barb Giardina of Edwardsville, was named Missouri Teacher of the Year.

Honorary degrees were conferred on James M. Furman, vice-president of the MacArthur Foundation, and Capt. Grace Murray Hopper of the Naval Data Automation Command. George M. Irwin of Quincy received the Distinguished Service Award.

The Council for the Advancement and Support of Education presented an exceptional achievement award to the University Center for its community relations programs, and University News Services received first place in the Information Services Division Awards Competition, sponsored by the National University Publications Association.

ENROLLMENT

For five consecutive quarters the university has shown an increase in student enrollment over that of the previous year's comparable quarter. On-campus enrollment exceeded 10,200 for Fall, 1981.

PUBLIC SERVICE

The university hosted nearly 400 special events and on-going programs during the year in which the members of the community actively participated. The Gerontology Program, Senior Olympics, Elderhostel Program, and the Arts for Older Adults reception, particularly welcomed older members in addition to the campus. In society, programs such as the Very Special Arts Festival, the Special Olympics were aimed at reaching young people with special handicapping conditions. And for the young set, there was the Autumn Festival for Children.

PROMINENT VISITORS

Prominent entertainers visiting the campus during the year included: poet Mona Van Dyke, saxophonist Melvin Davis, pianist Richard Belair, the McCoy Tyner Quintet, composer Lonnie List Smith, singer Bettye LaVette, Barry the John Biggs Consort and the Royal Lichenstein Quartet.

Representatives of national and international reputation included: Hans Kung, internationally renowned Catholic theologian; James Furman, vice-president of the MacArthur Foundation and former executive director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education; Tamas Varga, educator at the National Institute of Education in Budapest, Hungary; Leo Buscaglia, internationally-known educator, humanist and television personality; and Illinois Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph Goldheiser.

In March, a delegation of educators and administrators from the People's Republic of China visited the SIUE campus in October as part of a three-week tour of 15 state college and university campuses in the United States. The purpose of the visit was to assess the feasibility of educational linkages between Chinese and American colleges and universities.

RESEARCH AND PROJECTS

During the past fiscal year, the university received a total of $5,899,547 in extramural support for its programs. The Office of Research and Projects processed 265 proposals during the year. Of these, 131 were awarded grants by the university. Forty-nine were in the area of research, 72 were training awards, nine were for student support and one was for institutional support. Nearly 85 percent of the funding came from federal agencies, and 10 percent of the projects were state-supported, with the remainder supported through other means.

The Office of Area Development and the Center for Urban and Environmental Research and Services provided a variety of services to the larger community, including seminars, workshops, research and publications focusing on urban property investment, industrial site and building development, transportation, historical development, and area development and rehabilitation projects.

A SIUE faculty member received Fulbright awards, enabling them to serve as lecturers at universities in five different countries around the world during the 1981-82 academic year.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

A one-year certificate training program for waste water and water supply operators was launched at the Environmental Resources Training Center and a new library computer system was installed at Lovejoy Library. The new library system will enable the staff to more efficiently manage its resources and it will facilitate library resource sharing among academic libraries throughout the state.

A contract was signed with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services to offer day care services at the University's East St. Louis campus for the residents of the East St. Louis area.

In a summer Youth Conservation Corps project on campus, a second log cabin was constructed and a natural trial was completed through a swamp near Tower Lake.

SPORTS HIGHLIGHTS

With all the success the SIUE Cougars athletic teams enjoyed in the past 12 months, one would think that the highlight of 1981 must be the tennis team's fourth consecutive NCAA Division II championship, or the soccer team's 13 consecutive trip to the NCAA Division I Tournament, or the field hockey team's battle in the AIAW National Championships, or even the wrestling team's climb to the top four spots in the NCAA-II Wrestling Championships.

But no, the highlight of the year's athletic success have been a contest — not played on any field or any court. Most everyone would agree it happened May 18 when SIUE Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw and University President Earl Lazerson led several friends of the University in a groundbreaking ceremony to officially begin construction of the long-awaited $11-million Multipurpose Building.

A dream of university leaders and area legislators for more than 14 years, the Multipurpose Building became a reality in mid-May, and construction has proceeded right on schedule since then. SIUE fans are even hoping for a 1982 Cougars season that will be long remembered as the year the Cougars surprised the so-called experts and made their 13th trip to the NCAA Tournament. With just three seniors on the entire roster, and a squad filled with players who had never seen action on the Division I college level, Head Coach Bob Guelker led the Cougars to an impressive 13-4-1 record. Even in losing, the Cougars showed their power, dropping the four games by just one point to South Carolina, Indiana, St. Louis University and Eastern Illinois in overtime.

The field hockey Cougars also demonstrated their power again this year as they posted their highest finish ever in an AIAW Region Five Tournament. The Cougars, who hosted the two-day event, finished second by defeating Notre Dame and Franklin College before battling Eastern Illinois University for the championship.

BRINGING IT INSIDE

Once again, the biggest news of 1981 may not have taken place on the hardwood or the mats. Ed Bigham, SIUE athletic director, kicked off the excitement in June when he announced that Tom Pugliese would serve as the head coach of

Reduce wholesalers of U.S. food stamps

In a measure designed to reduce the potential for abuse in the food stamp program, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Mary Jarratt has announced rules that will significantly reduce the number of wholesalers currently authorized to accept and redeem food stamps.

"Under these rules, all of the 2,300 wholesalers currently authorized only to give the stamps to wholesalers who are needed to serve as redemption outlets for specific nonprofit cooperative food purchasing ventures, group living arrangements for the blind or disabled, treatment programs for alcoholics or drug addicts, shelters for battered women and children and retail food outlets which have no access to a bank," Jarratt said.

"Those wholesalers authorized to serve treatment programs, group living arrangements and shelters for battered women and children will only be allowed to accept food stamps in exchange for food," Jarratt added.

Wholesalers were authorized to redeem food stamps when the program first began, to remove any obstacles that might prevent retailers from participating in the program. But rather than continuing to allow retailers to give the stamps to wholesalers who then turn them in to a bank, the department decided that the best way to avoid any potential for misuse is for retailers to take the stamps directly to the banks themselves.

The department's inspector general recommended restricting participation in the program after investigating several cases in which wholesalers were redeeming improperly-obtained food stamps.

The department proposed rules last November and received 42 comments which were considered in developing final rules.

Discuss aid to disabled

All interested persons are being invited to attend a meeting on services for the disabled at 6 p.m. Monday, Jan. 11, in the Community Room at Alton Square.

The purpose of the gathering is to organize consumer involvement with the Department of Rehabilitation Services (DORS). The agency is providing services of all kinds to Illinois' disabled population. The meeting is part of an outreach effort of the Department and its network of Regional Consumer Advisory Councils.

In order to familiarize residents of Madison County with DORS and the services it provides, all DORS counselors who serve the Madison County area will be introduced during the meeting and their rehabilitation backgrounds and areas of service discussed. In addition, DORS Alton office staff will describe the services available through that particular component of the department.

All present or past clients of the department are being encouraged to attend, as well as other disabled individuals, family members, friends, and any other interested parties. Further details may be obtained by calling a Steve Dolan, Casework Supervisor in the DORS Alton office, at 1-800-885, voice or TDD.

CANNABIS ALLEGATION

Donald F. Moseley, 30, of 2811 Palmer Ave. was arrested at Nameok Road and E. 35th Street at 10 p.m. Monday on charges of cannabis possession and being a minor in possession of beer. He was freed on $15,000 bond.

THE SPRING SPORTS

In a feat that only the UCLA basketball team of John Wooden could rival, the men's tennis team captured an almost unbelievable fourth consecutive NCAA-II national championship. With the title clinched at the end of the semifinal rounds, the Cougars powered their way through the 32-team field. Freshman Ken Flach took home all the individual honors as the St. Louis won the number one singles competition.

While the Cougars were winning the tennis championship, the baseball team rebounded from a sub-500 year to post a 37-27 record in 1981. The Cougars defeated such nationally-known teams as Northern Arizona, Illinois, Missouri, Lewis, St. Louis, Bradley and Kentucky Wesleyan.

The softball team also had an outstanding 1981 campaign as the Cougars posted a 30-14 record, while the women's tennis team regained its 1979 form and won the AIAW state championship.

MADISON — Madison's 81-61 victory over Triad Tuesday night was more than a notch in the win column. It was a confidence builder.

Right now, confidence is a great concern for Larry Graham, Madison's head coach. Even though Madison is the defending Class A state champion, Mark Zarr, a senior center, is the only returning player who saw considerable action on that championship team.

Graham said, "We still have a long way to go. We won the ball game. A victory is a victory."

"If we can discover how to win, we'll be OK."

Madison evidently discovered the winning formula against Triad. The Trojans dominated the game. Madison did it the old-fashioned way with more natural talent, ability and skill than the Knights.

Triad led briefly midway through the first quarter, 10-7. A basket by Zarr gave Madison the lead, 11-10. The Trojans never trailed from that point on.

Madison built up its lead by simply outrunning Triad and setting a quick pace for the game. Time after time, Madison scored a basket before Triad could set up on defense.

Triad would then try to imitate Madison's runny game. But instead of a basket, the result was usually a turnover.

Siu-Weider, Triad head coach, said, "We're not a running team, especially against them. When we did settle down and run our offense, we played pretty well (offensively)."

At the end of the first quarter, Madison had a 22-14

DUPO — The pairings for the annual Dupo Invitational Basketball Tournament were released here today.

The tourney will be held Monday, Jan. 11 through Friday, Jan. 15 at Dupo High School.

The Madison Trojans, the defending tournament champions, have been seeded first.

Madison, with a record of 7-4 before action this Friday against East St. Louis Assumption, will take on the St. Louis Business School at 8:30 p.m. Monday. That game will be preceded by a game between Pattonville, Mo. and Valmeyer at 7 p.m.

Madison was originally given a first-round bye, but the St. Louis Business School, a satellite institution, expressed a desire last week to enter the tournament.

They fill up the place of the bye of the first round schedule.

The second two games of the first round will be played Tuesday, Jan. 12. St. Henry led. By halftime, the Trojans had increased that lead to 16 points, largely on the shooting of senior guard Carvell Caggett.

In the first half, Caggett scored 18 points. In the second half, however, Triad made a defensive change and held Caggett to only three points.

Madison continued its domination in the second half even though Graham

Prep of Belleville will face Columbia at 6:30 p.m. and Dupu will play Ritenour of St. Louis at 8 p.m.

Semifinal games will be played in both a winner's bracket and a loser's bracket. Monday's games will play at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 13. That game will follow a loser's bracket semifinal between Monday's two losers which will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Tuesday's winners will face each other at 8 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 14. The Tuesday losers will play at 6:30 p.m. that night.

Championship and third place games will be played Friday, Jan. 15. The loser's bracket (consolation) championship game will be played at 5:30 p.m. The third place game, pitting the losers of the winner's bracket games against each other, will be played at 7 p.m. The championship game will be played at approximately 8:30 p.m.

substituted freely. "They just have a little more natural talent," said Weider. "We played as hard as they did."

Both teams shot well from the field. Madison shot 59 percent and Triad shot 59 percent. Madison's defense, however, allowed Triad only 39 shots the entire game.

"Their rebounding killed us," said Weider. "They didn't allow us any second shots but we were giving them two or three opportunities."

Steve Brown, a junior guard for Triad, shared scoring honors with Caggett with 21 points. Mike Wade, a senior center, added 17 points and Mike Rogers had 10 points for Triad.

"Basically, I was happy with our overall performance," said Weider. "This was one of our better games even though we lost by 20. Madison is by far the best team we've played so far this year."

Madison featured a balanced offensive attack, with five players scoring in double figures. In addition to Caggett's performance, Shannon Manson had 12, Bill Papa and Avery Crawford each scored 11. Zarr added 10.

Even though Graham didn't believe his team played as well as it could, the win is still a positive boost.

"We try," said Graham. "If we don't play well, it doesn't look like we're trying."

Graham felt the victory over Triad will give the players the confidence they need to beat East St. Louis Assumption tomorrow night at Madison. In their second game of the season, Madison lost to Assumption by two points in East St. Louis.

Rested Steelers romp over Parkway West 52-6

By ROGER KRAMER
of the Press-Record

GRANITE CITY — Last week, the Granite City North Steelers finished second in the South wrestling tournament, but the second place finish took its toll on the Steelers.

So North coach Walt Whitaker decided to take things easy at practice Monday and Tuesday to rest his wrestlers. He hoped that Wednesday's match with Parkway West wasn't a major challenge. Whitaker's hope came true as the Steelers routed the Missouri school 52-6 in a dual wrestling match at North. North, 10-0 in dual meets so far this season, recorded two pins in less than two minutes and won decisions by such lopsided scores as 19-5 and 17-2.

"It was pretty decisive," Whitaker said. "We needed a victory like that. We didn't work very hard before the match because we had a pretty tough tournament, but it didn't affect us against these guys."

"I was pretty happy with the way the kids worked," Whitaker said. "I can't be too disappointed with the score we had tonight."

John Morris, who wrestles at 185 for North, picked up the quick pin of the evening in 1:02. Greg Nemeth (106) pinned Kurt Sawyer in 1:13. Other pins for the Steelers included Dale Bowles (112) over Tim Carlson in 3:13, Rodney Unger (132) over Mike Williams in 5:08, and Dave Owens (HWT) defeated Scott Martin in 2:15.

Colin Davis (98) scored the most lopsided decision. He beat Andy Fucio 17-2 to open the match. Undefeated Scott Corey defeated Alan Bess 19-5 in the 155 bout.

The rest of North's victories were much closer. Steve Smith (119) defeated Mark Waldren 10-3, Rick Brown (138) downed Jerry Watts 4-1, Monte Kessler (145) beat Dave Ventlinga 6-2, and Bob Patton (167) defeated Scott Rose 7-0.

Parkway's only victory came when Tom Ventlinga pinned Mark Whitaker in 1:29.

"I figure we're doing as well as we expected at this point of the season," Whitaker said. "A couple of guys who were questionable in the upper weight classes have been doing better than I thought they would do. We're a pretty good dual meet team."

"We also got a good tournament team too. I can't complain about anything this season so far," Whitaker added.

"I knew Smith and Corey were going to be tough, and the rest of our wrestlers have come along well. Our 185 pounder (Morris) has been wrestling a lot better. He's a pretty solid wrestler," Whitaker said.

Not only have the wrestlers in the upper weight classes been better than expected, Davis and Nemeth have performed above their expectations.

SIUE dumps Bearcats for second straight win

By TERESA GULL
of the Press-Record

GRANITE CITY — Win. Two in a row. Louisville.

After SIUE-Edwardsville's 82-68 victory over McKendree College last night at Granite City South, those three phrases were written on the blackboard in the Cougar locker room.

The first two statements were self-explanatory. The win gave SIUE a two game winning streak.

But Louisville? Last year, the Louisville basketball team was 0-8. They finally won the ninth game they played and went on to win 24 games in a row.

This year, SIUE was 0-8. Like Louisville, their first victory came in their ninth game.

Randal Jones, a former Madison High School standout now playing for SIUE, said, "We're going to try and make 24 in a row. At least come off .500. I'd be happy."

After Wednesday night's performance, first-year SIUE head coach Tom Pugliese believes it is not unrealistic for the team to win their remaining 15 games. He was extremely pleased with the way they played and controlled the game against McKendree.

"We did what we wanted to do. We kept their game in the 60's and we got as many as we could get on offense," said Pugliese.

Not until the second half, however, did SIUE show its dominance.

In the first 10 minutes of the first half, the lead bounced back and forth between the two teams. McKendree's shooting then hit a cold streak for nearly four minutes, allowing SIUE to build a 31-22 lead with 6:50 remaining in the half.

Poor shooting and fouls then plagued SIUE and McKendree battled back to a 36-36 tie going into the locker room at half-time. Nine points of McKendree's 13 points during their comeback were from free throws.

Archie Tyson, who shared scoring honors with Jones with 19 points, said, "We made a couple of mistakes toward the end. We let up and had a couple of turnovers."

It was all SIUE the second half. A goal by Tyson three minutes into the second half gave SIUE a one point lead — a lead which they retained for the rest of the game. The closest McKendree came was within three points with 8:50 remaining in the game.

"I think we took it out against them a little more the second half," said Pugliese. "I think we controlled the tempo of the game." Harry Statham, head coach of McKendree, felt the slow pace dictated by SIUE in the second half hurt their shooting. In the first half,

Trojanettes hold off Wood River for victory

WOOD RIVER — The Madison High School Trojanettes girls basketball team won the opening game of its season here Monday with a 39-30 victory over Wood River.

In girls' basketball action Tuesday, Granite City North lost a Gateway East conference decision to Cahokia 63-46. Belleville East defeated Alton 52-50. Highland defeated Roxana 50-41 and Dupu beat Hancock of St. Louis 50-25.

In other Monday action, Bunker Hill defeated Staunton 63-33 and Jerseyville beat Plaza Southwestern 52-26.

In Monday victory over Wood River's Oilerettes, Madison broke away from a 6-6 deadlock at the end of the first period to score 12 points in the second period and claim an 18-13 edge at the halftime intermission.

The Trojanettes were led in scoring by Rhonda Jacks who scored 20 points. Nancy Mikolasz added six points for the Trojanettes.

Wood River was led in scoring by Mary Broadway's 20 points.

A tough Madison pressing defensive unit forced the Oilerettes into committing 22 turnovers in the non-conference game. Wood River shot a dismal 30 percent from the floor.

Both teams cooled off somewhat in the third quarter. The Trojanettes outscored Wood River 8-4 in that period. In the fourth quarter, Madison outscored the Oilerettes 12-11.

Granite City North's loss to Cahokia's Lady Comanches lowered the Steelers' win-loss record on the season to 1-1, both overall as well as in Gateway East Conference action.

The game marked the season-opener for the Lady Comanches.

Tonight (Thursday),

Granite City South will play a non-conference game at Belleville East and Collinsville's Lady Kahoks will visit Madison. Junior varsity games are scheduled to get underway at 6:30 p.m. in both cases with varsity contests slated for around 8 p.m.

Some schedules indicated Collinsville's game at Madison to be slated for Wednesday night. However, it will be played Thursday, instead.

In other action Thursday night, Triad will visit Greenville, Jerseyville will play at Bethalto, Roxana will visit Mascoutah, East St. Louis Assumptions will travel to Breese to tangle with Central High, Cahokia will be at Alton, Okaville will travel to Trenton to play Wesclin, and Highland St. Paul will play at Alton Marquette.

Red-hot Steamers will host Avalanche Friday

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Steamers will look to run their record to 12-1 here Friday night when they host the Denver Avalanche in a 7:35 p.m. game at The Checker-dome.

The Steamers, who boast the Major Indoor Soccer League's best overall win-loss record, gained their eleventh victory of the season last Saturday with a 6-3 win over the Phoenix Inferno at home. A total of 15,195 fans watched the afternoon game, the first matinee of the season in St. Louis.

The Steamers got solo goals from Tony Sehniger (his sixth), Don Ebert (twelfth), Greg Villa (fifteenth), Larry Hulcer (first), Redmond Lane (fourth) and Joey Clark (first) against the Inferno. Goalie Slobod Iljevski made 28 saves and got his tenth win of the season. It was the Steamers' sixth victory in a row, a team record.

When the Steamers host the Avalanche Friday, they'll be facing the team goals thus far this season and leads the team in that category. St. Louis native Tim Walters is second in scoring on the team with ten goals.

Denver goalkeeper Pascale Antoine ranks second in the MISL behind Iljevski with a 3.39 goals-against average. Iljevski sports a 3.27 GGA and has made a league-leading 284 saves. Antoine has 147

Jones thinks Cougars can turn things around

GRANITE CITY — In the past, RANDAL JONES and the Granite City South gym have not gotten along.

Jones, a 1977 graduate of Madison High School, was thrown out of the last basketball game he played at South. That was while playing for the MISL Trojans. This time, dressed in an SIUE Cougar basketball uniform, his visit had a few more pleasant memories. On a seven-out-of-10 shooting performance from the field and five-out-of-five shooting from the free throw line, Jones scored 19 points to help lead SIUE to a 62-48 victory over McKendree College Wednesday night.

Jones almost saw history repeat itself, however. In the first half, he came close to having an early exit from the game.

His teammate, Archie Tyson, had scrambled for a rebound and was on the floor. A McKendree player joined Tyson on the floor and started fighting for the ball. Jones came to Tyson's rescue.

Members from both teams started shoving each other around. The referees quickly broke up the altercation and did not eject anybody from the game. "It was physical. Real physical," said Jones. "Coach (Tom) Pugliese (SIUE head coach) said they were going to be physical but I didn't think they'd be that physical."

Jones' scoring fetes for last night's game is a common occurrence for him this year. After nine games, he was leading the team in scoring, averaging 19.4 points per game. His shooting percentages, 56 percent from the field and 94 percent from the free throw line, are also the highest on the team.

He is also the second leading rebounder on the team, grabbing 6.2 rebounds per game.

Utilized for both his inside and outside shooting skills, Jones, Pugliese has found him to be a valuable asset to the team.

Although Jones is having a good year so far based on his individual performance, he would like the team to earn a few more victories. A member of the 1977 Madison Class A state championship team, Jones had gotten used to playing on a team with a winning record.

That's why Jones, along with the other members of the team, are hoping SIUE will have a winning streak similar to the University of Louisville. Last year, Louisville lost its first eight games and went on to win 24 games in a row.

And if Jones keeps playing at his current caliber, he can do nothing but help his team turn their current 2-8 record into a winning season.

McKendree shot 50 percent from the field. In the second half, they shot only 30.5 percent.

"We're a good shooting team normally," said Statham. "Shooting is usually one of our strongest points."

Statham blamed their low shooting percentage on their recent lack of practices. The team has only worked out three times since Dec. 21.

Leading scorers for McKendree were John Jankowski, a junior center from Nashville's 1978 Class A state championship team, with 20 points and Rick Klingelhoefer, senior guard with 15 points.

Using 10 different players throughout the game, Pugliese was pleased with the play of the substitutes, especially Steve Woebler, junior, and Chris Hansen, freshman. Woebler scored 12 points with Hansen adding seven.

The game was very physical, with the two teams engaging in a brief scuffle the first half. Pugliese said, "I was very happy we remained aggressive when that altercation broke up."

Pugliese added he was pleased to have the opportunity to play at South and said the team would try to return to Granite City to play future games.

Two players who have seen considerable action for SIUE did not play last night because of injuries. Al McCarron, who has been starting as point guard, missed because of a groin injury. Pugliese is not sure when he will return to action. Jeff Dean started in place of McCarron, scoring 12 points.

Lost for the season is Joe "Pick" Pickowitz, 6'11" senior center. He tore the cartilage in a knee during a pick-up basketball game over Christmas break.

by Harold Chitwood
If the engine stalls when the car is shifted to "drive" immediately after starting, it is probably starved for fuel. What to do? Remove the carburetor air cleaner and check the butterfly choke to see if it stuck in the open position. If it is not stuck, the automatic choke controls may need adjustment by a qualified mechanic. These adjustments are best made when the engine is cold and has not been run for several hours.
Whenever you think your car is not running properly, don't sit back and hope the problem takes care of itself. Most automotive problems are merely a nuisance but should be checked out if your car is to run the way it should. For minor or major problems call BIG 4 CHEVROLET COMPANY at 345-5444 or visit us in Collinsville at 1820 Vandalia Street. Our hours are Monday thru Friday 7-6 and we offer knowledge, concern, guarantees and experience.
AUTO TIP:
If the engine idles rough and seems to miss, it may be another reason to suspect that the automatic choke requires adjustment.

Airlift units aid space shuttle, hostages, injured in busy year

Headquarters Military Airlift Command, Scott AFB, Ill. — Military Airlift Command people began and ended 1981 on triumphant notes as world attention focused on MAC's humanitarian activities that helped protect American freedom and save lives, a spokesman said today.

The year was still getting its footing when MAC aeromedical airlift people flying C-9 Nightingales helped return 52 freed American hostages from Iran, Jan. 20 and brought an end to their 444 days of imprisonment and torture. They were flown from Algiers to Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany, on two C-9s and then to the U.S. with assistance on a presidential airlift jet to West Point, N.Y., to complete their return to American soil.

Toward year's end in the Far East, MAC's Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service achieved its 30,000th active-duty save when its Japanese and Philippine rescue units flew in to save 14 injured sailors from a grounded and capsized Filipino destroyer escort. This milestone came during the ARRS' 30th anniversary year.

Before, during and after these events, MAC people worked throughout the year to provide timely airlift, aeromedical service, search and rescue, meteorological support and audiovisual documentation for actual operations and for training missions around the world.

The space shuttle Columbia flew twice in 1981, and MAC people were on hand in both instances to lend support — as they will for all future shuttle missions. As rescuers stood by in case of a hoped-against abort, Air Weather Service people provided constant updates of conditions at the launch and landing sites as well as in near-space itself.

In 1981, MAC aircrews, nurses and medical technicians provided aeromedical airlifts for more than 68,000 patients, consisting of 17,000 airmen, 8,000 soldiers, 11,000 sailors and marines, 14,000 military family members, 17,000 retirees and their families and 1,000 others, including several foreign nationals and civilians.

MAC's operations support airlift fleet composed of C-739 aircraft also carried more than 90,000 passengers on time-sensitive missions.

As usual, MAC people kept busy in those 12 months with an assortment of exercises designed to test the command's ability to project military forces on short notice around the world.

Bright Star 82 was the third and, by far, the largest major exercise involving the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force. This operation, concentrated in Egypt, Somalia, Sudan and Oman, tested MAC's ability to move American forces across an ocean and throughout these nations to meet war scenarios.

Altogether, 390 C-141 Starlifters, 56 C-5 Galaxy, 85 C-130 Hercules and 11 commercial missions were flown throughout the training operation which lasted more than a month.

A highlight of Bright Star deployment was a 24-hour air drop comprised of 18 C-141s and six C-130s. Six of the Starlifters flew non-stop with in-flight refueling from Pope AFB, N.C., to an Egyptian drop zone.

Precise timing was needed because this contingent was met a few miles from the drop zone by 12 C-141s that had flown from Germany and six C-130s out of Italy. The joined formation dropped 800 paratroopers and 186 tons of equipment in just a few minutes.

Team Spirit '81 was one of the largest exercises of the year that tested U.S. and Korean defensive capabilities. In 64 days, MAC airlifted 26,983 people and 8,402 tons of cargo to Korea. The command used C-141B air refueling capabilities for the first time over the Pacific to make non-stop deliveries from the continental United States to the Far Eastern nation.

While it was summer in the United States, it was winter in Antarctica, and that was when MAC flew a history-making flight during a mid-winter airdrop resupplying National Science Foundation people at remote sites on the frozen continent.

A C-141B left Christchurch, New Zealand, and received three in-flight refuelings from KC-135 tankers while en-route to McMurdo Sound. Twenty-six containers totaling 13,000 pounds were airdropped at McMurdo.

The aircraft continued 800 miles farther south to drop six containers weighing 2,700 pounds at the South Pole before returning non-stop to Christchurch. Total flying time was 15.3 hours, and C-141B refueling capability allowed a 33 percent in mission airdrop weights.

Dragon Team 481, a large-scale joint airborne-air training transportability training mission, showed MAC's tactical airdrop capability. It used 46 C-141 and 147 C-130 sorties to airdrop 1,967 soldiers and 266 tons of equipment and airdropped 5,886 people and 522 tons of equipment.

Border Star '81 exercised infantry, mechanized armor, and strategic and tactical air forces in a Southwest U.S. desert. MAC airlift carried 6,000 passengers and 4,300 tons of cargo from 44 stations to four forward sites in the exercise area and then returned them.

In the face of real world contingencies, natural disasters, exercises, humanitarian airlifts and day-to-day operations, 87,000 members of the MAC family turned their capabilities and talents to airlifting more than 2.5 million people, and more than 500,000 tons of cargo throughout the year. MAC security police made headlines when they participated in the first Air Force Peacekeeper Challenge. They came home with five gold, one silver and three bronze medals from the worldwide competition and placed in nine of 12 events.

More significant for the SPs was establishment of MAC's air base ground defense exercise area at Little Rock Air Force Base, Ark.

Little Rock's 314th Tactical Airlift Wing also achieved recognition when it edged out teams from the active-duty Air Force, Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve and other allied nations to become the best overall unit at MAC's Volant Rodeo 81 at Pope.

The competition tests a team's ability to put the right load in the right place at the right time using various cargo delivery techniques.

MAC's Aerospace Audiovisual Service was also at Pope — just as it is at any Air Force exercise — documenting the activities and providing photojournalism of events for all the world to see and better understand U.S. military affairs.

The year of 1981 was also a transition time for MAC. General Robert E. Huyser retired as commander in chief to be succeeded by General James R. Allen. General Thomas M. Ryan Jr., MAC vice commander in chief, left to become Air Training Command commander and was succeeded by Lieutenant General Robert F. Coverdale.

With the new across-the-board military pay raises and other initiatives, "change" was the watchword throughout the command.

Future changes were especially emphasized with the unveiling of McDonnell Douglas Corp. as the contractor for the proposed C-17A cargo airlift jet.

Also due for possible change is the Civil Reserve Air Fleet. It had its enhancement program expanded to include modification of existing civil aircraft and purchase of convertible features in new

AUTO STRIKES FENCE

Roy E. Valencia, 30, of 2222 Terminal Ave., was charged last week with failing to report a crash in which the left front of an auto hit a fence owned by the Schmitt family at the alley behind 1008 Poplar St. There was damage to two top rails, two corner posts and 25 feet of fencing.

Future changes were especially emphasized with the unveiling of McDonnell Douglas Corp. as the contractor for the proposed C-17A cargo airlift jet.

Also due for possible change is the Civil Reserve Air Fleet. It had its enhancement program expanded to include modification of existing civil aircraft and purchase of convertible features in new ordered wide-body civil passenger aircraft. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Civil Air Augmentation Program is also designed to allow NATO member nations to volunteer their cargo-capable civil aircraft for MAC use in emergencies.

General Allen and the rest of MAC's staff have set their sights on these and other command people and equipment needs to help make 1982 and future years even more notable than the 12 months just past, the spokesman concluded.

Enterprise ethic vanishing?

(This is the sixth in a series of 15 articles exploring "Working: Changes and Choices." In this article, Michael Maccoy asks what will replace the traditional ethic of enterprise, which he believes is disappearing. This series was written for C O U R S E S B Y NEWSPAPER, a program of University Extension, University of California, San Diego, with funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Copyright (c) 1981 by the Regents of the University of California.)

MICHAEL MACCOY

From the founding of America, the ethic of enterprise has expressed the deepest values of the national character: liberty, individualism, innovation and adventure.

Today, in an age of large organizations, this ethic no longer inspires most Americans. Indeed, there is a danger that they will lose their motivation to work altogether. What has happened?

At first, this was a nation of farmers and craftsmen who believed in self-reliance and self-improvement.

In the 18th Century, Benjamin Franklin provided a list of values for successful, independent small businessmen, including industry, order, resolution, temperance, sincerity, justice and moderation.

At the beginning of the 19th Century, the ethic of individual enterprise was transformed, at least for many Americans, from that of the conservative craftsman to that of the more daring entrepreneur.

The frontier and the industrial revolution inspired ambitious dreams and opportunities.

The entrepreneur exchanged the craftsman's traits of caution and moderation for ambition and high ambition.

As Tocqueville and other visitors pointed out, Americans wanted to live well, and they loved business.

In the craft era, technology could be created and employed by individuals. The individual craftsman, such as Paul Revere, designed, built and marketed his products, sometimes with the help of apprentices. Even factories, at first, were essentially workshops with groups of craftsmen.

ENTREPRENEURIAL ETHIC.

Then, the creation and use of productive technology outgrew the reach of single individuals or groups of craftsmen.

Through the division of labor and specialization, entrepreneurs were able to employ unskilled farm labor and the immigrants from Europe.

At the end of the 19th Century, the new ethic was expressed in the novels of Horatio Alger. With hard work, daring, and a little bit of luck, even the lowliest shoeshine boy could become a rich industrialist.

But the very success of the entrepreneur in creating huge companies made it harder for others to succeed, particularly in areas where entrepreneurs had created large and rich technology-based companies.

Small businesses became less secure, less of a realistic possibility for those who dreamed of rising from rags to riches.

As economist Robert Heilbroner points out, big business was built not because of greed, but because of new technology. "Greed is a constant within capitalism; technology is not," he writes.

The entrepreneurial ethic — the notion that a person with the right attitude can make it on his own — gradually became less a realistic ideal than a fantasy.

As late as the early 1950's, auto workers interviewed by Eli Chinoy were able to bear their monotonous work by dreaming of opening their own gasoline stations or garages.

Yet, during the period of 1950 to 1960, the number of self-employed in America fell from 80 percent to 8.5 percent of the workforce.

Much of the change reflected the disappearance of family farms. But the trend also implies that it became increasingly more difficult for an individual entrepreneur to prosper.

Although the number of non-farm self-employed in the workforce stayed at approximately seven percent from 1970 to 1980, this halting a downward trend, over 80 percent of new businesses fail.

A successful small business today required special skills, attitudes and, often, technology.

The restaurant owner, for example, needs a special aptitude: new "greasy spoons" cannot compete with the technology, organization and advertising of McDonald's.

Character traits that used to serve a self-contained small businessman are no longer appropriate when he has to compete with large corporations.

For instance, the willingness to work long hours and keep the grocery store open on Sundays and holidays paid off in the past. But what is the use of such sacrifice and endurance when large chains decide to remain open 16 hours a day, 365 days a year?

Although opportunities remain — particularly in advanced technology, special services, or the leisure industries — the competition is tough.

The scientist-engineer must have a brilliant idea, be able to raise enough capital, learn how to market his product, and manage employees according to government regulations.

Increasingly, self-employment has become a realistic possibility only for the exceptional — not for the average — American, whose work future is likely to be found in a large organization.

Although now a small percentage of the workforce, the entrepreneur still plays a key role in the economy.

The 10.8 million small non-farm businesses are defined as those employing fewer than 500 employees. They may be small, but they provide almost half the jobs and create about two-thirds of new employment each year.

CAREER ETHIC. The self-employed are still, on the average, more satisfied with their work than wage earners.

But an increasing percentage perceive disadvantages of self-employment as compared to a career in organizations: excessive responsibility, long hours, and economic insecurity.

Moreover, the entrepreneurial ethic no longer expresses the strivings of many of the most talented and highly motivated individuals in our society, including those who work for entrepreneurs.

With the rise of large business and government in the 20th Century, there emerged a new ethic of career advancement.

Alfred P. Sloan, the chief executive of General Motors, wrote in 1941 that "the corporation (is) a pyramid of opportunities from the bottom toward the top with thousands of chances for advancement."

Rather than hoping to establish their own businesses, technicians trained in business schools seek jobs in corporations, government, and the non-profit sector.

Their goal has been to move up in a large organization, toward increased responsibility and organizational status, by solving problems, applying the latest information, and managing others.

Success depends on administrative rather than entrepreneurial skills.

NEW ETHIC FOR THE 1980's. As the American character evolves in the 1980's, the career ethic is also changing.

There are still careerist-entrepreneurs, gamesmen who enjoy risk-taking and leading winning teams within large businesses. They are necessary for the success of the firm.

But studies show that people at work have become more critical of sacrificing their integrity and emotional life in order to move up the pyramid.

As a recent American Telephone and Telegraph study shows, young managers do not want to be bossed, but are asking for more cooperative and respectful relationships at work.

As the old spirit of free enterprise fades and the career ethic loses its force, there is the danger that the very motivation to work will be lost.

Without a work ethic, employees will become cynical, oriented to "beat the system" and to get as much as possible, giving as little as they can.

The result would be a deterioration of American character and a decline in the vitality and competitiveness of American corporations.

But not all the changes in the spirit of enterprise need be negative. There is evidence that greater involvement and interest in the enterprise can be stimulated by changing the workplace.

Employees who are being "turned off" by autocratic management demonstrate that they are willing to give more if they are managed with respect.

Young managers, in turn, respond positively to a more participative environment, where they can be innovative.

The most successful organizations of the future may be those with a new spirit of cooperative enterprise.

Next: Richard N. Bolles, author of "What Color Is Your Parachute?" discusses how our notions of a "career" are changing.

Today's author, Michael Maccoy, is director of the Project on Technology, Work and Character, which studies how management and new workplace technology affect human development. It is affiliated with Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.

A psychoanalyst and social psychologist, Maccoy has been a frequent consultant to government, industry and unions on improving the quality of work life. He is the author of "The Gamesman" and the forthcoming "The Leader: Managing the Workplace."

United Way stretching its resources, but unable to solve long-term crisis

By GEORGEANN MCGEE

The meeting was held in MacMillan's office, roosted in a second-floor room of the Coordinated Youth Services building, 1254 Niedringhaus Ave. The building's variety of community-service tenants symbolizes the intermingling of ideas, manpower and funds that is the core of the weekly agency meetings.

"Maybe we are going to have to go further," he commented when considering the extent of the aid United Way can now offer families.

MacMillan, Coordinated Youth Services director, was speaking informally at a gathering of UW leaders, joined in a regular "thinking tank" and information-sharing session.

During the meeting, directors touched upon the plight of families who have been given emergency help by UW, but for various reasons, are still wanting.

UW agencies, however, are faced with their own limited resources and worries about losing some valuable part-time workers funded through federal programs, according to the staff members.

Cautious about her own future in light of other government cutbacks, Rose Vivod, one of the UW part-time employees who distributes clothing and food, showed the box of nurses' aid training herself.

"When people come to us, they want more volunteers may be needed from the community to supplement UW's workforce. That was just one of the thoughts briefly considered as members informally expressed their agencies' concerns."

Other problems surfacing as the community emergency directors surveyed area resources and needs were that: "Keeping warm will be the next few months for some families who can expect little 'extra' financial assistance for such emergencies. Cited was one family who plans to move out of their apartment in a few days were tarnished by a landlord who promptly took them and their children, disconnecting the utilities to save on expenses."

"An unemployed husband and wife, whether or not actively searching for a job, may have no financial support programs open to them, unless they fall under certain specific categories."

A mattress and an end table are the only current furnishings in the family's storage area. The furnishings are intended for fire victims and those trying to re-establish homes for their scattered families.

United Way's food freezer has some leaves, but not many to divide among its multitude of requests.

For three years, a well-rounded sampling of United Way (UW) agency staff members have gathered each Monday morning to pool facts and coordinate efforts. At a time when resources are being limited by a shaky economy and a swing in political philosophy, UW directors use the once-a-week exchanges to get the most out of their budgets.

Among those attending this week's session were Larry Miller, newly-appointed executive director of Tri-Cities Area United Way, and Rev. M. J. "Jack" Quiglian, director of Catholic Charities and the Children's Home and Aid Society of Illinois, who is the group's contact for Hunger Inc., a program designed to combat hunger both locally and on a much larger scale.

Also, William Martin from the Illinois Commission of Delinquency Prevention, and Jack Quiglian, who keeps pace with winter utilities bills, repeating questions he was already starting to hear at his agency and Norma Petty, Protestant Welfare Association director, who also was concerned about heating bills.

Others included George Cook, director of United Way's Catholic Charities, and labor's liaison with UW; Capt. Donald Salsbury, director of the Salvation Army; and Mrs. Vivod, who said she would gladly offer to anyone who is interested a tour of Community Services clothing and food distribution center.

Maybe two, three or four times, MacMillan said, a client may approach United Way agencies for service. After that, agencies direct the person to a social worker for a more in-depth approach to the situation which has become a continuing crisis.

"All of us have made an effort to get families on firm footing," MacMillan said.

Both Catholic Charities and the Protestant Welfare Association provide counseling through the cooperation of professional counselors and area ministers.

"Our resources are being limited," MacMillan said. When an individual expresses the local agencies' ability to help, the matter has to be referred to the township and state agencies.

Fussing on information is often a simple solution to client's problems. Cook, referral director, reported sending one family of the utilities deferred payment plan offered by Illinois Power Co. He said some people are not aware of those comparatively simple remedies to their situations.

But other problems persist. "Right now, one of the reasons kids are taken out of their homes is because their homes have no heat, period," said Martin, who works with youth crisis intervention.

Miller said utility assistance is "hard to run down." He said direct grants may be possible for Public Aid recipients, but state funds from other sources vary.

Capt. Salsbury said he told the family whose utilities had been prematurely disconnected to call the Land of Lincoln Legal Assistance Foundation in Alton via its free telephone number, 451-4650.

Cook said people assume federal cuts have already eased the legal agency, but "they indicated they are in business and will help."

Cook said another source of legal aid for union members could possibly come from the attorneys representing the unions.

Capt. Salsbury said there were some apartments in Granite City, "I wouldn't want to put my dog in." Furnishings help change some of those conditions through the UW furniture storage area at the St. Louis Area Support Center (depot). The warehouse was started about 1978 and has assisted families which have lost their possession due to fires, and families trying to create more of a family atmosphere for their children.

While UW maintains a pick-up service for donations, Miller said the furniture supply has "pretty well been depleted over the last year."

The food center maintained by the Community Services also has suffered a loss of donations recently. Sounen by senior citizens have vanished with certain business and changes of procedures, said Cook.

Begun by senior citizens who receive such donations. The freezer is now stocked with some loaves bought with UW funds.

Within the last few months, UW has discovered the Food Crisis Network, a national organization designed to make surplus food available to various organizations. Miller said.

Organized by senior citizens who harvested crops with imperfections to be distributed to the hungry, the network offers service agencies food at nine cents a pound. Trips are made from here to the network's St. Louis office about once a month.

A three-day food package is available for applicants to community services agencies. One month, if an emergency situation exists, said Mrs. Vivod, who prepares the food for distribution. However, the supply might not be enough for a family waiting for Public Aid assistance. Each food package contains provisions for three meals a day.

She said some people are referred to the food center from other agencies and some are told by friends. Although a form must be filled out, these are no set guidelines an applicant must meet, Mrs. Vivod said.

Protestant Welfare maintains its own food center, but other UW agencies such as the Red Cross, Catholic Charities and the Salvation Army use the Community Services food center.

Clients may visit the clothing center, also housed at the Coordinated Youth building, once every four or five months, Mrs. Vivod said. During a visit, the client is outfitted as completely as possible in seasonal clothing, including four or five changes of shirts or blouses and pants. Infants wear also is available.

UW agencies are making adjustments in their programs as they face possible reductions of federal programs, supplying both programs and part-time employees, said Cook.

"We've got the organization," he said, to meet the needs of the emergency client, "but not the personnel."

FARM CORPORATION MEETING
A meeting on Farm Corporations will be held tomorrow at the American Legion Hall in Breese. The program starts at 10 a.m.

TERRACES and how they can be used to aid farmers will be discussed by Don Rendecker, a Highland area farmer, who is among the speakers at Madison County Agronomy Day Tuesday.

Recent changes in the tax structure may have some effect on whether your farm business should be organized as a corporation or in some other form of business arrangement. In addition to tax implications, estate planning may be an important reason to select one form of business arrangement over another.

Whatever form of organization you choose, you need to know the advantages and disadvantages of each. Topics to be covered on the program include: fringe benefits, legal problems, types of corporations, formation and serving the corporation, tax-free transfer of assets, estate planning opportunities, effects of law changes on the corporation structure and dissolving the corporation.

The speaker will be Allen Rock, U. of I. agriculture law specialist.

REMINDER OF MEETINGS
The Urban Pesticide Dealers Clinic scheduled for Wednesday, Jan. 13, at the Holiday Inn in Collinsville will provide an opportunity for commercial applicators to obtain commercial pesticide applicators' licenses. Homeowners may be interested in the educational program presented at the clinic.

Farm families may want to mark Jan. 15 on their calendars. On that date, an estate planning seminar will be held at Belleville Area College. The program starts at 1 p.m.

Aid for family fire victims
The Tri-Cities American Red Cross, Coordinated Youth Services and the Salvation Army are all working to help Everett Dunnivant and his family.

Dunnivant's home at 2009 Troy Ave., Nameoki Township was destroyed New Year's morning by a fire of undetermined origin.

The Madison Fire Department answered the fire call, however, Madison police at the scene a minute after the fire department was called reported the house already was completely engulfed in flames.

The local Red Cross operates a family burn out program and made arrangements for clothing through the clothing center at Coordinated Youth Services.

A Red Cross official said the family also will receive a one month rent check, as they are seeking a place to live.

Dunnivant, his wife, Marie, sons, Harold, age 20, and Steven, age 18, and daughter Barbara, age 15, are living temporarily with a son, William Dunnivant, at 1928 Beckwith Ave., Nameoki Township.

A year-old paving machine valued at $8,200 was stolen from the Nameoki Village Shopping Center parking lot during the weekend, it was discovered Monday by the owner of the machine, Miller Asphalt Co., 2576 Washington Ave.

Also stolen during the weekend were a $3,250 year-old roller and a $450 floor trailer, both parked at the asphalt company.

The number of annual deaths changed from the 400s to the 500s in 1978 and has remained above the 500 mark since, with the exception of 1978, when 479 deaths were reported.

While deaths appear to have steadily increased during the past 11 years, the numbers of births have decreased steadily, reflecting smaller families, a declining enrollment, more local couples having babies outside of the city and fewer "out of town" couples coming here to have their babies.

Since 1970, the number of babies born here has been cut by more than half. Figures follow.

Sloth nearly picked as nation's symbol

If you've ever studied the backside of a dollar bill you know that America's national bird, the bald eagle, clutches an olive branch in its right talon and a bundle of arrows in the left—symbolizing America's desire for peace and its willingness to fight for freedom.

And nearly every schoolchild knows that the bald eagle is now an endangered species throughout most of its former range. Once abundant from coast to coast, these big, fierce-looking birds are now numerous only in Alaska and Canada.

But few people realize that the bald eagle wasn't even on the list of contenders when three of the nation's founding fathers—Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, and Benjamin Franklin—were named by the Continental Congress to design our national seal and symbol. That was on Sept. 4, 1776, the same day the colonists declared their independence from England.

It took six years, three committees, and several artists to come up with a seal featuring the now-familiar spread eagle, according to the "National Wildlife" magazine. The original blue-ribbon committee leaned toward mythological and Biblical figures, the magazine reports, and apparently the only other animal considered for appearance on the seal was the sloth—a slow-moving, tree-dwelling tropical creature associated with laziness and indolence.

The story of how the bald eagle beat out the sloth—and other characters—is being recalled as the nation prepares to observe 1982 as "The Year of the Eagle." Resolutions are pending in both houses of Congress to commemorate June 20, 1982, as the 200th anniversary of the day the Continental Congress adopted the eagle as our national symbol.

The sloth, a native of Central and South America

usually seen hanging upside down, appeared in a design suggested by John Adams. In Adams' allegorical scene, the mythical Greek hero Hercules was torn between the charms of a maiden representing Virtue and the tempting life of the sloth. Franklin called for a depiction of Moses dividing the Red Sea. Jefferson wanted to show the children of Israel wandering through the wilderness.

Fortunately, the Congress wasn't threatened by any of the founding fathers' designs, nor was it moved by a second committee's proposed seal depicting on a shield a warrior and a figure representing Peace.

The eagle didn't show up in any proposed designs until a third committee was formed, and even then, the bird played a minor role in another allegorical scene. Finally, in 1782, Congress turned the matter over to its secretary, Charles Thomson, who selected the eagle for first use, using the eagle as the central element in the seal's design.

One member of the original committee, Ben Franklin, was unimpressed even after the Congress adopted a seal designed around the eagle. Franklin called the new national symbol "a bird of bad moral character" that "does not get his living honestly," referring to the fact that the bald eagle often steals its food from other birds. Franklin also wrote, perhaps facetiously—that although the turkey was vain and silly, it had preferred it as the national emblem.

Franklin was by no means the last American to criticize the eagle. For the next 150 years, frontiersmen, ranchers, and farmers gunned them down as predators and varmints. Not until 1940 did Congress outlaw the shooting of eagles.

Because they sometimes feed on dead animals, bald eagles are still put down by some critics as scavengers, but President John F. Kennedy spoke for most Americans 20 years ago, says National Wildlife, when he called the "fierce beauty and independence of this great bird" an apt symbol of the "strength and freedom of America."

Now, throughout most of the country, the bald eagle is struggling, not to maintain its honor but to survive as a species. Due to loss of habitat, the ingestion of deadly pesticides, illegal shooting, and other causes, it is listed as "endangered" in 43 of the lower 48 states and "threatened" in the other five—Oregon, Washington, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan.

The "Year of the Eagle" was proclaimed to remind all Americans that the country's living symbol, like many other species of wildlife, is on the endangered list, and that, as President Kennedy said, "we shall have failed a trust if we permit the eagle to disappear."

PFC. CARROLL BROWN

Earns medal in Army exercise

Army Private First Class Carroll E. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Brown, 637 Margaret St., Mitchell, has been awarded the United States Army Achievement Medal in ceremonies held at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The local serviceman received the medal for "outstanding performance of duties" during the recently conducted "Bold Eagle '82" field exercises. Pfc. Brown, 26, also earned a Commander's Commendation award and a letter of appreciation for "outstanding appearance and performance" in the annual IG inspection at Fort Stewart last fall.

He enlisted in the military in September, 1980.

SENT TO JAIL

Wilson A. Mitchell, 54, Apt. 3, 3121 S. St., was sentenced Monday to serve 30 days in the Madison County Jail and pay $50 in court costs after being charged during the weekend with aggravated assault and disorderly conduct. After being arrested by Granite City police during a disturbance call New Years Day, Mitchell allegedly struck one person and threatened to kill the police who took him into custody. Mitchell appeared before Associate Judge P. J. O'Neill.

Uses for some yule decorations

By BOB WILLIAMS

As our society becomes more technologically oriented, many of the decorative objects we select for Christmas have become reusable. Some of us have artificial Christmas trees, wreaths, arrangements and such; so we can pack them away after each holiday season for reuse next year.

Others of us stick to old traditions. We place a wreath of real holly or juniper on the door or place a live tree on the hearth. A growing poinsettia may live the table with its red or white blossoms. Then, when the holidays are over, we hate to part with those things that have beautified our homes.

There are some uses for some of your left-over Christmas plants and some words of caution.

The berries of holly are mildly poisonous and are dangerous to young children. As a tea, however, the dried leaves have been used as an astringent, diuretic and as a bitter.

To prepare, crush the dried leaves and brew two teaspoons in hot water until strong. No more than one cup a day is recommended.

The cedar, which is used as a preservative, is also occasionally used as the cedar. This plant has a pleasing odor that can be kept the year around by simply chipping the bark from the lower trunk. These chips can then be dried and saved. The wood chips are used as one would use sawdust. A warm pleasant tea is produced.

The berries of the cedar are also used. It offers some aid in digestive problems and acts as a diuretic. This may serve to increase appetite. Too much can inflame the kidneys.

To prepare, steep one teaspoon crushed cedar berries in one-half cup water for 5 to 10 minutes. Strain. One cup a day is the usual dosage. The cedar berries, a day, can be chewed. Children use much less.

Mistletoe The mistletoe, that plant for lovers old and young, is of very little use except as a ruse to get one extra love. Its berries are deadly poison and should be kept from the kids.

The plant, when used, is known to increase blood pressure and also has been used externally to reduce bleeding. This is one plant to leave alone. Caution: Use mistletoe only for kissing, and I recommend a double dose every six hours.

Poinsettia This plant has much mistletoe mistletoe surrounding it. The main falsehood is that it is poisonous. It is not. The poinsettia is a spurge which has a number of deadly members but itself is not. The poinsettia is a native of Mexico, which was regarded by the Aztecs as a symbol of purity. Later, when the church held sway in Mexico, the plant was adopted into Christian pageantry. It is one of the most beautiful of the Christmas ornaments. The poinsettia has no food use but don't throw it away after Christmas.

Its leaves will drop off. Then in the spring, cut the stems down to 10 to 15 cm (4-5 inches) above the soil or above where the plant grew out last year. Report in well draining soil. Fertilize lightly. Keep in a warm dry place until new growth appears. In the fall, gradually water and place in normal sun for 9 to 10 hours. It must not have light from dusk to dawn. It should bloom again by the next Christmas.

Traffic fines increase again

By MARK RESMANN

Madison County drivers, who in November experienced a $5 increase in traffic fines, will now be forced to pay an additional surcharge for each violation they commit.

Effective Jan. 1, drivers in the entire state now pay the added fee to establish the state's "Traffic and Criminal Conviction Surcharge Fund." The fund will provide revenue to operate the Illinois Police Training Act.

According to Willard "Butch" Portell, Madison County circuit clerk, the General Assembly has been trying to pass the bill for some time.

He said the training program it will fund is a very worthwhile one, but he thinks the added administrative involved in separating the surcharge makes it impractical.

"The Illinois Police Training act has a lot of merit. It's designed to take the amateurism out of city police forces," he said. "The officers would pay for the training of municipal police at the Illinois State Police Academy."

But the reason I, and other circuit clerks, have opposed it is the fact that it will take more manpower to divvy traffic fines between the city, county, and state than it's worth," he told reporters.

Portell said the earlier $5 fee increase in Madison County, for traffic fines only, was passed by the county board to aid the budget problems his office was incurring due to an increased workload. "We haven't seen any of those funds," he said.

According to the new surcharge act, every fine imposed in sentencing for a criminal or traffic fine (except a parking or registration offense, or one committed by a pedestrian) shall include an amount payable to the Traffic and Criminal Surcharge Fund of the State Treasury.

The penalty assessment is as follows: For fines up to $39.99, $2 penalty assessment; $40 to $59.99, a $4 penalty assessment; $60 to $79.99, a $6 penalty; $80 to $99.99, an $8 penalty; $100 or more, 10 percent of the total fine imposed.

One circuit clerk employee, who works in the traffic division, said he did not see any increase in fines for traffic violators is getting out of hand. "I don't understand why the fees keep increasing. In many other cities, they're being reduced," he said.

State offers cold facts about winter

There is no way to completely avoid severe winter storms in Illinois. But inconvenience and hardship can be lessened if you take the time to be prepared, according to state officials.

Suggestions on preparing for storms are given in a 12-page publication, "The Cold Hard Facts About Winter Storms," written by the Illinois State Water Survey, a division of the Department of Energy and Natural Resources (ENR).

This booklet lists some of the preparations to make after a winter storm is forecast, as well as information on the nature of severe storms in Illinois.

The Water survey says to make sure your home and car are winterized. If your furnace breaks down after a heavy snow or your car won't move, service personnel may not be able to reach you.

To make sure your car is ready for winter travel, have the battery and ignition system checked, put snow tires on the car, and be sure that lights, wipers, heater and defroster are in good working order. Check the weight oil in the crankcase makes starting the car on cold mornings a little easier.

Keep abreast of the latest storm information in the Press-Record or on TV or radio. The National Weather Service issues a winter storm "watch" when hazardous weather conditions may affect this area.

"Warnings" are issued when dangerous weather is threatening the area.

If storms are forecast, check your battery-powered equipment to be sure all is in working order in case your power goes out.

If you heat with wood, oil or bottled gas, make sure you have enough fuel on hand. Fuel carriers may not be able to make deliveries during the winter of 1977-78.

Michael Witte, acting director of ENR, says that a winter storm dumps a large amount of snow or ice on this area.

Also, check the food in your home and stock an extra supply, including plenty of food that requires no cooking or refrigeration. Make your trips for supplies before the storm develops.

Single copies of the booklet, "Some Cold Hard Facts About Winter Storms," can be obtained from two sources.

The Illinois State Water Survey, Box 5050, Station A, Champaign, Ill. 61820 or a local Emergency Services and Disaster office (ESDA).

Severe winter storms produce more total damage in Illinois than any other form of short-term severe weather events, including tornadoes, lightning and hail, the Water Survey has determined.

Michael Witte, acting director of ENR, says that and 1978-79, the 35 severe storms that struck this state resulted in losses of $2 billion to individuals, businesses and the state. They were also directly or indirectly responsible for 72 deaths and more than 2,000 injuries.

The last two winters have been tame by comparison, with only two or three severe winter storms in the state. The current winter? We must wait and see.

A severe winter storm in Illinois is defined as one that produces six or more inches of snow in 48 hours or less somewhere in the state, or one that produces damaging ice or glaze over at least 5,000 square miles. That is an average of five such storms in Illinois in a typical year.

Winter storms produce damage to vehicles from accidents caused by slick roads and poor visibility. Damage to building roofs results from the weight of excessive snow.

Heavy snow combined with high winds can cause stoppages or serious delays in all transportation systems. These in turn affect personal travel, business activities, and deliveries of goods and services, including food and medical care.

A major cause of death during and after heavy snowstorms is an heart attack from an exertion of shoveling snow.

However, during major winter storms, deaths also occur from being trapped in isolated vehicles. From freezing by exposure without adequate protective clothing, and from auto accidents.

Witte said the greatest damages often result from ice storms, especially in Central Illinois, which has the dubious distinction of being the nation's primary area for freezing rain.

The heavy accumulation of ice resulting from such a storm can pull down power and communication lines, topple radio and TV towers, and paralyze the state's transportation systems. The impact of ice storms is especially felt in urban areas.

The board of education of the combined Venice high and grade school district started this month without any funds in the treasury and faced with the prospect of not paying its employees and incidental expenses or calling an election for a bond issue. Official cognizance of the critical situation was taken Monday when a meeting of the board was held after receiving notice from its bank that 75 per cent of the district's anticipated revenue had already been expended and no further warrants would be honored.

For their "progressive and unique approach" to the planning needs of the Granite City area, four local governmental units will share the seventh annual Civic Achievement Award of the Associated Retailers and Civic Association, it was announced today by Judge Wesley Lueders, chairman of the special Award Committee. The four municipal groups are the city of Granite City, Granite City School District, Granite City Park District and the Granite City Housing Authority.

The City of Madison may develop two major shopping centers soon if the city council approved a plan which Mayor Mike Seay will present to the aldermen tomorrow evening. The plan calls for the construction of two commercial areas, one encompassing a city block in the downtown Madison area and a smaller center on the other end of town, according to the mayor. The estimate cost for both shopping centers is $1,250,000. The project will be financed with revenue bonds.
